Curlett Holds Foul Shooting Record With 91

Sam Curlett, Member of Kingston Team in 1910 Caged 91 Fouls in Practice—Largest Crowd Was 2,276 Back in 1910.

The crowd attracted at the Kingston-Celtic basketball game Wednesday evening, at the armory was very large but by no means was it a record crowd for the armory. According to the gate official there was paid a total of 1,208 admissions.

The high record attendance at the armory to witness a Celtic basketball game was 2,276 paid admissions, which occurred a few seasons ago. But still this number fell short a few hundred of breaking the record attainable here. According to figures kept by an official at the armory the record of paid admissions was 2,276. This number viewed a game played in 1910, between Kingston and Troy in the old New York State League.

The Kingston team was then composed of Curlett, Frankel, Tome, Jenschel, Penino and Mayham. The official also looking over data as far back as 1919 has something to say of records for shooting fouls. Beckman and Holman have recently been given the credit of making records for shooting fouls in practice, their number being in the neighborhood of 50. The official says their dope on making records is all wrong and they have still to travel hard, for in 1919 in the Kingston armory Sam Curlett scored 91 shots without a miss. It was no unusual matter for Curlett to get 50 without a miss. In at least four league games Curlett would put his team in front by scoring 20 out of 22 fouls.

CURRENT OFFERINGS AT THE THEATRES

The new vaudeville program at the Kingston Opera House the last half of this week which opened Thursday night proved a delightful surprise. Every one of the five acts are different and they make up a wonderful show. The photoplay is Snowy Day Baker and his wonderful horse in "Empire Builders." "Guarded Women" the photoplay at Keeney's again tonight successfully proves two theories. It offers conclusive evidence that there are men of honor still left in this world of storm and strife, secondly it shows that certain members of the female of the species absolutely need the strong will and protecting arm of an honest, dependable man to guard them against their own innate frivolousness which is ever-ready to plunge them into the sea of disaster. "Going Up," the famous Broadway success, featuring Douglas MacLean, is tonight's feature at the Auditorium. The rollicking tale of a timid aviator who was mistaken for a famous aviator. His knowledge of "fights" confined to the imagination, he was caught in a queer predicament when he had to enter a race with the girl of his heart looking on.

The picture offering at The Orpheum today is "Strongheart in 'The Love Master'." It thrilled a who witnessed it Thursday. After a year in the Northlands mid the giant forests, snow capped mountains and white wind swept wastes, comes again to the screen, Strongheart, the wonder dog of "The Silent Call" and "Brawn of the North" in a picture even more stirring. Then there are five pleasing vaudeville acts.

Why Walter Johnson Wins Popular Favor

Here's why Walter Johnson is regarded as he is by players, managers, owners, fans, the whole world, says Bill Brandt in the Philadelphia Ledger.

Billy Evans, the prince of umpires, went to the Washington club house about two hours before the start of the grand finale. Billy had with him two brand-new American league baseballs. Friends of the umpire desired Johnson's name written on the horsehide, as a memento of the greatest world series ever played.

Johnson was in uniform, but it wasn't yet time for practice. He was sitting on a trunk not saying much.

He looked up at Evans. "Holy smoke!" he said slowly. "Billy, do you mean to say there are two persons who want my name on a baseball after the fine faeco I have made out of myself this series? Well, if they want it, I'll sign. That's one thing I'm good for. Writing my name!"

LEONARD IS ABOUT READY TO RETIRE

To Vacate Throne Without Another Defending Fight.

Benny Leonard is about ready to announce his retirement as a lightweight. It is not improbable that he will follow the lead of Johnny Dundee, recently retired feather king, and vacate the throne without another defending contest.

Leonard has always been heavy, and is not getting any lighter. Leonard could have made the weight this summer if a legitimate challenger had been developed. He had gone through a long siege of training and was on a simple diet.

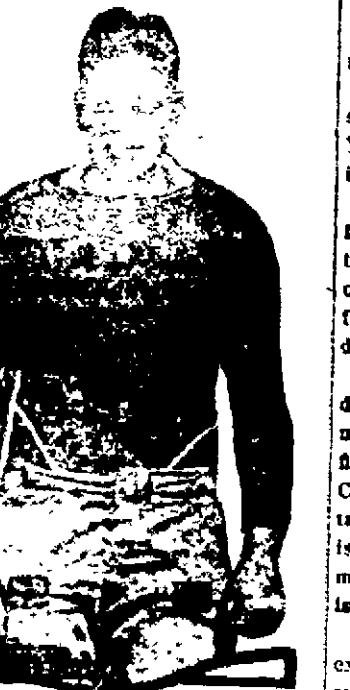

Leonard had hopes Luis Vicentini, the Chilean, would come through fast enough to qualify for a championship test. Vicentini, hardest hitter among the challengers, had the stuff but frittered away his chances in Broadway cafes.

One by one the other contenders faded into obscurity until presently none were left with the slightest claim to distinction as a lightweight challenger. Leonard then arranged a bout with Micky Walker for the welterweight title. This did not come off, due to an injured thumb sustained by Leonard.

This bout will not be held until next summer. It will be an open air attraction with Tex Richard doing the promoting. If Leonard wins he will continue as a welterweight champion. Otherwise he will hang up the mittens for good.

Leonard promises to be the second lightweight champion to retire undefeated. Jack McAuliffe, old-timer, was the other. Leonard's retirement will be due to weight. McAuliffe's was due to lack of competition. In McAuliffe's day the title was not worth a great deal of money. It has been worth nearly $500,000 to Leonard.

Baltimore Is too Good for Balance of Circuit

Baltimore won its sixth straight International League pennant this fall. It finished in a walk, 19 games ahead of Toronto in second place and 24 in advance of Buffalo in third. It was one of the holiest victories in the history of the organization.

Baltimore, all told, topped 117 hits to 46 defeats. It made up a percentage of .709. The Orioles got away to a splendid start and set the pace the entire route. It clinched the flag weeks before the end of the season. In the American League this year some twenty games separated Washington from the last place team. A glance at the International shows there were nearly 60 games difference between Baltimore and Jersey City, which finished last.

Poughkeepsie Here Saturday

Saturday afternoon at the Athletic Field the Kingston High School football squad will play the Poughkeepsie grid team in the most important game of either team's schedule.

Poughkeepsie has beaten Kingston for the last three years in these annual battles. According to the statistics so far this season Kingston has a keen edge on the Bridge City boys. However, Poughkeepsie is playing a much better game than they were the first part of the season. They beat Oakwood Prep. School 12-0 last Saturday at Poughkeepsie.

The Kingston team has gone through very light practice this week with only one scrimmage on Thursday evening. This will be the last game that some of the varsity men will ever play against Poughkeepsie, so there will be a scrappy team representing Kingston. The game will be called promptly at 3 p. m.

Yale Talks of "Harvard Jinx"

Results in Former Seasons Scare Old Eli Backers—Blue Is Five to Three Favorite Over Crimson.

By Telegraph to The Freeman. New York, Nov. 21.—Harvard seems to have a perennial jinx on Yale and almost anything can happen in football.

Both of these things are recognized facts in the best football circles. But they haven't kept the youthful sons of Old Eli from making the Blue a favorite over the Crimson for Saturday's contest, 5 to 3.

That's what the odds are here today and there is not a lot of Harvard money in circulation, either. For the first time in some several years, the Cambridge institution seems to be taking defeat for granted, although it is convinced that the Crimson will make a battle of it from start to finish.

Peculiar breaks have brought unexpected victory to Harvard in past seasons. Most present day fans will remember the game a few years ago when Charlie Buell carried Harvard to victory simply because a Yale left tackle failed to go down on a punt. And there's that other time when a Yale punt bounced off a Harvard man's shin squarely into George Owen's arms and George immediately romped through to the Yale five yard line and put the Crimson in scoring position.

No later than last year Yale was doped to win by at least four or five touchdowns. But Yale didn't. For rain and mud and sleet and cold all combined to aid a Harvard team that suddenly found itself, and Yale managed to pull out a victory by a margin of only 12 points.

Enthusiastic undergraduates, taking cognizance of these facts, speak with conviction of the "Harvard jinx." And even old grads, who should be well past the superstitious stage, were dubious as they recall the stories.

But Yale is a 5 to 3 favorite for Saturday. You can't get away from that. And by all the laws of football, the Blue should win handily.

Featherweight Bouts Tonight

By Telegraph to The Freeman. New York, Nov. 21.—The business of developing a featherweight champion, with the New York Boxing Commission as developer-in-chief, was to be launched tonight in Madison Square Garden. Six of the nation's leading featherweights will clash in three ten round bouts designed to bring forth an outstanding pretender to the throne formerly occupied by Johnny Dundee, "resigned."

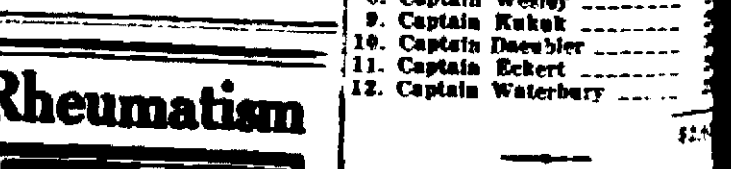

The ambitious fighters are in the order in which they fight tonight: Danny Kramer, Philadelphia vs. Mike Dundee, Rock Island, Ill. Louis (Kid) Kaplan, Meriden, Conn. vs. Bobby Garcia, Camp Holabird, Md. Jose Lombardo, Panama, vs. Lew Paulso, Salt Lake.

NEW FACES EXPECTED IN CRIMSON LINEUP

By Telegraph to The Freeman. Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 21.—Head Coach Bob Fisher and a small squad of Harvard varsity dependables left here today for New Haven and after a luncheon at Hotel Taft will motor to the Yale bowl where a short practice session will be held. No official lineup was forthcoming from Coach Fisher but many new faces will be seen in the Crimson lineup of Saturday. Reports have it that Gebroke, Cheek, Phil Spaulding and Nash are actively out of the Yale game. Izzy Zarakov, Miller and Leo Daley are in the same predicament and their fitness will not be determined until game time Saturday.

Sharpe Residence Moved 25 Feet

A thorough investigation of every room in the Sharpe residence, now being moved by the Clynes Company to the rear of the site of the new Governor Clinton Hotel to be erected at Albany and Clinton avenues, failed to reveal the slightest displacement of plaster or any piece of interior decoration. The windows and doors open and close perfectly.

The moving operation is proceeding slowly but surely and by noon today the building had gone 25 feet on its journey. Work is now being done to get the new set of sliding timbers in readiness to carry the house when it reaches the end of the sliding timbers now being used.

Women Oppose Child Labor Law

Federal Amendment Considered Perilous by Executive Committee of Federation of Women's Clubs—$300 Contributed to Kingston City Library.

There was an important meeting of the executive committee of the Kingston Federation of Women's Clubs at the Kingston City Library on Thursday afternoon, Dr. Day, the president presiding. Following the routine business it was announced that the Federation lecture course had cleared thus far close to $500.

Miss Van Hoevenberg, chairman of the lecture committee, which has made such a phenomenal success financially of this year's lecture course, said that it was hoped also to sell many tickets for the Leacock lecture which will come in January. Single tickets may be had from Federation members at any time. The highest compliments were paid Miss Van Hoevenberg and her committee for the efficient way in which they had handled this big entertainment problem and a rising vote of thanks was unanimously given Miss Van Hoevenberg and committee.

Mrs. A. Ray Powley reported one new member, Mrs. Arthur Gill. The federal child labor amendment was brought up for discussion by Dr. Day, and the executive committee was unanimous in their vote to instruct the secretary to send communications to the senator and assemblyman from this district asking them to vote against this amendment which was considered pernicious.

In connection with the conservation work of New York state, the committee voted to have the Federation purchase five acres of land for the reforestation work as now planned, and the public health committee further voted to buy one acre. It was unanimously voted to give $25 from the Federation treasury toward the expenses of the president, Dr. Day, in attending the recent convention of the State Federation at Lake Placid, reports of which will be given at the next open meeting.

The Federation further voted to contribute $20 to the fund required to entertain the International Council of Women which will meet in Washington next May.

The committee also voted to contribute at least $300 of the proceeds of the lecture course to the Kingston City Library for the purchase of books.

An invitation to the Federation was received from Sorosis, of which Mrs. Harry P. Van Wagenen is a member, to meet Mrs. Van Wagenen, who was made the chairman of the Third District Branch at the recent state convention, at the home of Mrs. A. Noble Graham, 21 Janet street, next Monday afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock.

Before adjourning, tentative arrangements were made for the districting of the Tuberculosis Christmas Seal Sale in the city which is to be carried on by the Federation.

Oriental Belles For Armory Ball

Came from China, So They Say, To Unravel Future for Those Who Attend The Junior League Ball.

On Thanksgiving Eve there will be present at the Armory two distinguished fortune tellers (more Chinese than otherwise) Princess Ming Ching Toy, and Princess Ting Kong Chow. These ladies from the Orient (or somewhere or other) have been imported especially for the occasion. It is rumored that when they are at home they live on the great wall of China. In the land of the Dragon (or thereabouts) they are renowned far and wide for their power to read the future. At the Oriental Ball they will reveal what the future holds in store for the citizens of Kingston. One glance at a person's hand, and these mysteriously gifted people will describe a future husband or wife. Would anyone know what wealth the future will bring? What happiness awaits? Whether they will travel or remain at home? What golden adventures are in store? Then they should seek out these famous palmists at the ball. Visitors will find them in a royal pagoda, in the Chinese garden, at the Armory. Dragon red is the pagoda, and lacquer gold and midnight black where it rises above the gay lanterns which will be swinging in the soft shadows of the garden. It will be a golden adventure awaits and amid incense and flowers and the music of temple bells fortunes will be read by the mysterious veiled women from the Orient.

Annual Turkey Shoot.

The Willow Brook Rod and Gun Club of Highland will hold its annual turkey shoot at their club grounds on November 25th. There will be a fine lot of home grown turkeys, geese and ducks. Everyone welcome no matter how good they may be with the gun. Lunch served on the grounds.

Excelsior Hose Company Meeting.

Excelsior Hose Company will hold a special meeting at its home on a Sunday afternoon to arrange for a supper to be given some time next week.

Mrs. Warren G. Harding Dead After Long Illness

Intimately Associated With Her Distinguished Husband's Numerous Activities—Mourning His Loss and That of Friends Whose Death Depressed Her—Funeral Monday.

MRS. WARREN G. HARDING.

By Telegram to The Freeman. Marion, Ohio, Nov. 21.—Mrs. Florence Kling Harding, widow of the late President Harding, died at 8:55 this morning at the home of Mrs. Charles E. Sawyer, White Oaks Farm.

Funeral services will be conducted Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock at Epworth M. E. Church. Mrs. Harding has been a member of that church since girlhood. Dr. Jesse Swank, pastor of Epworth Church and Dr. George M. Landis, pastor of Trinity Baptist Church of which President Harding was a member, will officiate.

Today Mrs. Harding's body was removed to the home of her niece, Mrs. Frank J. Longshore, on East Church street. Following services Monday, the body will be placed beside that of the president in the temporary receiving vault at Marion Cemetery until the Harding memorial is completed.

Telegrams to President Coolidge and all the members of the cabinet were dispatched by George Christian, Jr., secretary to President Harding, and Dr. Carl W. Sawyer signed the death certificate as follows:

"Cause of death chronic nephritis, contributor chronic myocarditis and hydro-nephrosis."

Last Public Appearance.

Mrs. Harding's last public appearance in Marion, except for her almost daily visits to the tomb of the late president, was on October 16, when she attended the concert of the United States Marine Band at Garfield Park, where the dedication ceremonies were. On the occasion of the visit of the musicians to Marion, advance arrangements were made by the Kiwanis Club for a funeral dirge at the Harding tomb. This was played in the early afternoon and Mrs. Harding also attended the afternoon concert.

The first news that Mrs. Harding's condition might be alarming was given out by Dr. Sawyer when he announced on October 30 that she was compelled to deny herself to all visitors. Rabbi Joseph S. Kornfeld of Toledo, recently returned from Persia, where he had served in diplomatic service as an appointee of the late president, visited Marion on that day to pay his respects to the memory of the late president, and called at the Sawyer home, but failed to see Mrs. Harding. It was then learned that she had been confined to her bed for several days and that her condition even at that time was most discouraging to those who were intimately acquainted with her.

Never Recovered from Shock.

Since the death of President Harding at San Francisco on August 2 of last year, Mrs. Harding never has been regarded as quite recovered from the shock and strain of crossing the continent on the funeral train with the endless grief ridden formalities that followed. While she preferred to be in Marion with her home friends and relatives, she was surrounded here by sympathy and depressing memories. She left Marion early in January and lived in the Willard Hotel in Washington up to the time Brig-General Sawyer, who had long been her physician, was

Moose Members Enjoy Roast

Kingston Lodge, No. 970, Had Enjoyable Time in Pythian Hall Thursday—Entertained by Local Talent and Artists from the Orpheum Theatre.

About two hundred people attended the pig roast given by Kingston Lodge, No. 970, Loyal Order of Moose, Thursday evening, in Pythian Hall and a fine menu was served, which was followed by an entertainment and dance.

During the evening "Reggie" Pallen's orchestra, with George Schilling at the piano, "Reggie" at the drums, Edward Ward with his banjo, and Gordon Burhans with his saxophone, provided the music for the roast and dance that followed.

The entertainment that followed the serving of the roast was one of the best ever enjoyed by the Moose and their friends. George Spalt sang several solos, while Louis Roberts gave a clog dance.

Fred L. Van Dusen, the well known local magician, gave an exceptionally fine program of magic and sleight of hand and was followed by Martin Lynch in songs.

The acts from the Orpheum theatre were also good. "The Two Daisies," two young women in savannah solos, violin solos, and dancers were fine. "Barley and Burley," the "loose leg nuts" from the Orpheum theatre, closed the program with their fun provoking gymnastics.

Dancing was then enjoyed until a late hour.

Father Objected to Harding.

Mrs. Harding met Warren G. Harding shortly after he had purchased the Marion Star. The future President was working night and day to put his paper on a paying basis, and the struggle was slow and discouraging. Following a brief courtship, they were married in July, 1891, over the strenuous protests of the bride's father. In fact, the estrangement lasted for nearly seven years. The marriage ceremony took place in the famous Harding house, from which Mr. Harding conducted his "front porch" campaign for the Presidency thirty years later.

Helped Her Husband.

Mrs. Harding from the very start took an active interest in her husband's activities—whether in the field of politics or of business. Soon after their marriage she entered heart and soul into the work of making a "real paper" out of the Star. The circulation and business offices were her special province, and much of the paper's present success can be attributed to her untiring efforts.

Then, as the late President began to become known throughout his state, Mrs. Harding turned her attention to politics. Running for Governor of Ohio, however, Mr. Harding lost, and the two went abroad to rest after a strenuous campaign.

Returning, Mr. Harding was urged to run for the United States Senate. He left the dejected up to his wife. Some later, it was two days before the politicians could reconcile Mrs. Harding to a return to politics.

Once in, however, she worked constantly for his election and was rewarded by victory.

The first two years in Washington as wife of a senator did not appeal overmuch to Mrs. Harding. The official life rather awed and bored her at first.

Early Years in Washington.

Because of ill health, Mrs. Harding took little part in the social life of the capital during those first years. An operation for the trouble that ultimately cost her her life resulted in a long, slow convalescence. For the most part, when able to get out, Mrs. Harding spent her time in the galleries of the Senate following the debates and legislative business in which her husband participated.

Just as she hesitated when the Senatorial nomination was thrust upon her husband, Mrs. Harding again balked when the presidency was suggested.

Once in the race, nevertheless, Mrs. Harding bent every effort to promote the success of Senator Harding. No campaign trip was completed without her; no meeting was satiated until she, also, had been introduced.

Husband Her Only Fan.

It was in an interview, shortly after the memorable election that returned the late President to the White House by a 7,000,000 majority, that Mrs. Harding perhaps best expressed her feelings toward her husband.

"I wanted Warren to win because he wanted to," she said, "and for no other reason. He is the greatest man in the world and there is not a thing that I am boasting know you will think I am boasting but I have only one fan—the only one I have had for the last twenty-six years—and that is my husband. It is old-fashioned, I know, but that is the way I feel about it."

Stricken Two Years Ago.

The strain of the continual round of duties finally told on the "First Lady's" health. It was while taking

Two New Rules for Supreme Court

Lawyers' Committee Suggests Rule to Clear Calendar of Old Cases and Also to Expedite Business.

At the October term of Supreme court, Judge G. D. B. Hasbrouck, who presided at the term, suggested that a committee of members of the Ulster County Bar be appointed to formulate some rule by which the trial calendars of the court in Ulster county might be rid of some of the cases which have been piling up for years. Some of the cases which appear on the calendar have been noted for years and have not been disposed of. At each term of court scores of these cases appear on the calendar only to be passed.

Judge Hasbrouck suggested that the Ulster County Bar adopt a rule similar to that in effect in Albany county by which the calendar might be cleared of these old cases.

The Hon. J. N. Vanderlyn, Amos Van Eten, Andrew J. Cook, Hon. Joseph M. Fowler and Frank W. Brooks were appointed a committee to draw up rules. This committee has drawn up rules and Judge Hasbrouck has them under consideration. He would be glad of any suggestion which any member of the bar might make prior to his forwarding the same to the Appellate Division for action.

Following is the report of the committee:

Hon. G. D. B. Hasbrouck, Justice of the Supreme Court, Kingston, N. Y.

The committee appointed by Your Honor, consisting of Hon. John N. Vanderlyn, Amos Van Eten, Andrew J. Cook, Hon. Joseph M. Fowler and Frank W. Brooks, to formulate and suggest special rules of practice to be made applicable to the county of Ulster, by which rules it is sought to relieve the congested condition of the calendar in Ulster county, to expedite the trial of cases on the calendar and to simplify the making up by the clerk of the calendar, do respectfully report as follows:

The committee was called together by the chairman appointed by Your Honor, Hon. John N. Vanderlyn, at the office of Amos Van Eten, at Kingston, N. Y. Frank W. Brooks was appointed secretary of the meeting. After discussion and deliberation, the following rules are recommended:

Rule 1.

"In the county of Ulster where a party has served a notice of trial and filed a note of issue for a term at which the case is not tried, it is not necessary for him to serve a new notice of trial or file a new note of issue for succeeding terms and the action must remain on the calendar until it is disposed of, except that the justice holding the October term of the justice court in each succeeding year shall make an order at the opening of the term directing the clerk to mail to each attorney whose name appears as attorney in a case on the calendar which has been an issue for more than two years, an order to show cause, returnable at the opening of court on the second Monday of the term, why such case should not be stricken from the calendar; and such justice shall on that day call the calendar and strike therefrom all such cases where no reason is shown for their continuance thereon."

Rule 2.

"On the Friday immediately preceding the first day of any term of the supreme court held in the county of Ulster, the clerk of the court shall, at the court room in the county court house at 2 p. m., on that day, call the calendar of causes for marking; and all of the causes marked ready for trial by both parties shall constitute the causes which the day calendar shall be made up from day to day until all such causes have been disposed of. Such causes must be ready for trial when reached, and if not ready trial will be marked over the term unless will be marked over the term unless adjourned by the justice holding the term upon good reason shown by affidavit to have arisen after such causes have been marked ready."

Respectfully submitted,

JOHN N. VANDERLYN, Chairman.

France Plans Big American Loan

By Telegram to The Freeman. Paris, Nov. 27.—President Doumergue and his cabinet have authorized Finance Minister Clementel to present to Parliament a project for a $100,000,000 loan to be floated in New York, part of which will be used to pay off the loan made to France by J. Pierpont Morgan and Company.

According to the newspaper Temps the government has demanded that the loan legislation be passed tonight so that subscriptions could open in New York Monday. The senate finance committee approved the loan at 1 o'clock and a special session of the senate was called for 8 o'clock to consider it.

The loan will bear interest at seven per cent, according to Temps and will mature in 25 years.

By Telegram to The Freeman. Youngstown, O., Nov. 21.—Following discovery of $500,000 worth of Liberty and industrial bonds in Lincoln Park here today, Postmaster B. E. The bonds were found by three men who turned them over to Westwood who believes they were stolen and left in the park when the thieves discovered they were registered and could not be disposed of without detection.

Abductor Pleads Guilty After Trial Begins

Decides Over Night to Change Plea, After Story of 14-Year-Old Girl Had Been Heard by Jury.

When county court convened this morning at 10 o'clock, the jury which was selected to hear testimony in the case of The People vs. Lenwood Keys, indicted for abduction, was polled and Frank W. Brooks, attorney for Keys, then asked permission of the court to change the plea of Keys. The former plea of not guilty was withdrawn and a plea of guilty to the charge was entered.

In answer to the usual questions Keys said he was 21 years old, born in Virginia, was a resident of East Kingston, his father is living and that he had never been convicted of any crime before. Keys although of negro parentage, is of extremely light complexion.

In view of his age and the fact that he was not yet 21 years of age at the time the crime was committed, Judge Fowler sentenced him to Elmira State Reformatory, there to be confined until discharged by law.

Keys was charged with the abduction of Mildred Costa, who was the first witness called by Assistant District Attorney Cleon B. Murray after a jury had been obtained Thursday afternoon. She entered the court room slowly and reluctantly took her place in the witness box. This slowness and reluctance characterized her answers to the questions put to her, and her attitude towards the court proceedings. Sometimes she would not answer the questions for five minutes, at other times she would not answer the question at all.

Miss Costa said that she is the 14-year-old daughter of Pasquale Costa, whose home is in East Kingston. She has two sisters, one eight and the other 12. She first met Lenwood Keys in June, 1923, when he drove a party to his taxi-cab to a neighbor's house. At this time she was 13 years old, her birthday being February 15. From then until April of this year they met on various occasions, wrote letters to one another, and several times rode at night alone together in his automobile, she said.

On the night of April 8, 1924, she and Keys talked over plans for what might be called their elopement. The following night she said she went to bed about 8:30 o'clock, in her bedroom on the ground floor. An hour later she heard a tapping on the window. She arose, dressed herself and stepped through the window to the ground. Lenwood Keys, she testified, followed her, walked to Keys's Oldsmobile which was a short distance away.

They drove to Albany and from there to Troy where they arrived in the morning. Keys promised to marry her that night, she said. From that time on they lived as husband and wife. From Troy they went to Syracuse, stayed at a rooming house there, the next night and then went on to Buffalo where they put up at a hotel. Keys signed the register, "Lenwood Keys and wife," she said.

From Buffalo they motored to Youngstown, Ohio, where they stayed for more than a month and a half with Lenwood's sister. Next they rode day and night till they reached Haverstraw. One night was spent in a rooming house in Haverstraw. The next night they moved to a white house owned by a Mr. Peck. At first there was no furniture but Keys later produced a number of pieces.

Two weeks afterwards Deputy Sheriff McCullough of East Kingston and another man whose name she did not remember came and took her to the house of the justice of the peace in Haverstraw. Lenwood was brought there also. After the session at the house of the justice of peace she was brought to her home by Deputy Sheriff McCullough.

This ended her direct testimony. Mr. Brooks had just started his cross examination when court recessed for the day.

After Keys had pleaded guilty and was sentenced this morning, no further business was ready and court went into recess until Friday afternoon, November 28, at 2 o'clock. All jurors had previously been excused for the term and the twelve men in the box were also excused for the term.

GOLDEN RULE DAY
TO AID NEAR EASTFive Million Dollars Needed for Refugee Orphans Under American Care.

23 NATIONS JOIN OBSERVANCE

State and County Committees Organized to Insure Success of Nation-Wide Campaign.By CHARLES V. VICKREY
General Secretary of the Near East Relief.

With the co-operation of civic and religious leaders throughout the United States, the Near East Relief has inaugurated its campaign for the second observance of International Golden Rule Sunday on December 7. The aim is to raise funds to provide during the coming year for 100,000 orphan children under American care in Bible Lands. More than five million dollars is the minimum needed.

The national Golden Rule committee was organized several months ago, under the chairmanship of Cleveland H. Dodge, the well known philanthropist. An executive council is under the chairmanship of John F. Finley, formerly Commissioner of Education of New York State and now prominent as a New York editor. State and county committees are being organized throughout the United States to insure success of the nation-wide campaign.

Setting aside of one day each year in honor of the Golden Rule as a guide to individual, national and international life, is an American idea which has been approved and adopted by twenty-three nations. The day will be observed throughout Europe and in many non-European countries, such as Japan, Korea and Palestine.

Four annual holidays—Christmas, New Year, Easter and Armistice Day—have heretofore been celebrated internationally. A fifth has now been added to the list. The movement was started in America by the Near East Relief as a new, striking and intensive method of raising funds for the feeding of the children in American orphanages in Bible Lands.

On this day—December 7—Americans are asked to eat a dinner of soup, bread and stew, or of corn grits and condensed milk, or of rice, macaroni and cocoa. As they eat this novel meal, they are asked to remember that, coarse as it is, it is all that holds body and soul together for the orphaned boys and girls overseas, to whom the elemental factor of hunger is each day's vital problem.

People here are reminded that, however poor the fare may seem, they can at least have two bowls of soup if they like, and two slices of bread. As they finish their second serving, they are asked to remember that the orphan wards of the Near East Relief can have only one serving, for there is not enough to allow more. They are asked to remember that these children exist on such a diet 355 days out of each year, and they will not live to become men and women unless more bread and more soup are provided.

Those who eat the Golden Rule dinner will not lack distinguished company. Such a meal will be served on Sunday in the homes of kings, prime ministers and presidents.

The Golden Rule is a universal creed. It is a common denominator of all religious and social welfare organizations. It is a test of our religion and our sincerity. Golden Rule Sunday is a day for personal stock-taking, for measuring our lives by a universally accepted standard of life to ascertain how nearly we have attained to an ideal. It is a day of plain living and high thinking. The dinner, however, is not an end in itself. It is an occasion, in the words of President Coolidge, "for bringing to the minds of those who are prosperous the charitable requirements of those who are in adversity."

On Golden Rule Sunday the citizens of all nations will be seated figuratively at the same table, partaking literally of the same food, thinking the same thoughts and entering into a new realization of the brotherhood of mankind.

TURKEY DINNER IN PALESTINE

HOMES RUINED BY WAR NOW REBUILT

Reconstruction in France is Nearly Completed, U. S. Is Told.

Washington.—According to statements given out by authorities in France, approximately 80 per cent of the houses destroyed during the war had been rebuilt by July of this year; 90 per cent of the damaged canals had been reconstructed; 80 per cent of the trenches used by the troops of both armies had been filled in, and 80 per cent of the damaged factories had been put in operation, according to the European division of the Department of Commerce. While to a great extent the repairing of damages done in the regions was executed with government aid, nevertheless, much is due to the energy and industry of private individuals and owners.

Agricultural land has been reclaimed, families have been returned to original dwellings and manufacturing and mining industries have been put into operation. Since that time reconstruction has gone forward at an increasingly rapid rate, and with nothing intervening to interrupt the present progress it may definitely be completed before the middle of 1925.

Population Returning.
As an illustration of the improved conditions in the ten departments included in the devastated regions, particular mention may be made of the figures of increase in population and of the statistics issued by official sources regarding the resumption of activity in the various branches of industry. The pre-war population of the regions under consideration numbered 4,000,183, while at the close of the war, on November 11, 1918, this had been reduced to 2,075,067. On January 1 of this year the population amounted to 4,233,677, or only 486,506 less than at the opening of the war. In 3,238 out of 3,255 communes the local administration has been fully reorganized and the number of public schools and postoffices in these districts exceeds those of pre-war years.

Shortly before the close of the war, as is well known, a corporation was organized, known as the "Credit National," whose purpose was to facilitate the repair of damages caused by the war. The company was formed by a group of the most important French banks, with a capital of 100,000,000 francs, and its declared object was the payment in cash of compensation due to those who had suffered damages from the war and to arrange for the payment of interest on such advances. Capital required to pay for war damages was raised by the issue of interest bearing obligations in the form of bonds on which interest, redemption and premium charges were guaranteed by the state, the money for such payments being included in the French budget. Up to April 30, 1924, claimants had been paid 54,000,000,000 francs. Various methods of payment were adopted. Some of the payments were made in cash, some in kind, others in government securities.

Damages Run into Billions.
January 1 of this year the total state liabilities definitely recognized on claims to individuals within the devastated regions amounted to 62,500,000,000 francs, and there was a further sum of more than 3,500,000,000 francs connected with contested decisions. It is expected that an additional 16,000,000,000 francs will be awarded, bringing the total of damages up to approximately $2,500,000,000 francs. As will be seen, therefore, approximately 28,000,000 still remain due to sufferers of the war, after deduction of the 54,000,000,000 already paid.

Although the French government is undertaking the responsibility for financing reconstruction, a considerable part of the direct burden of cash payment has been distributed among different agencies. The French treasury, at the end of 1923, had furnished almost 22,000,000,000 francs, while the Credit National had provided another 22,000,000,000. At the end of April the Credit National had increased its cash payments to a total of over 24,000,000,000, and this, added to the amounts furnished by the government and certain annuity certificates, made a total of 54,000,000,000 francs paid. Fifty per cent of farming lands have been restored and three-fourths of the coal mines are now operating.

Cat Points Ring

Manch Chunk, Pa.—John Moyer of Manch Chunk had an unusual experience while putting up a radio aerial at Packerton. He lost a valuable diamond ring and after hunting for it a long time, got discouraged and was about to give up the search, when his attention was attracted by the queer movements of a pet cat. He noticed the feline watching something and occasionally walking toward him. He followed the cat and, sure enough, there laid the diamond ring.

Cash Found on Sea

Malaga, Spain.—A strong box filled with bank notes floating upon the sea off Estopona almost gave fishermen who found it attacks of heart failure. The notes were of the new republic of Spain, formed by the outlaw tribesmen in Africa, and of no value except to the Britons.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

FAIRYLAND CHATTER

They were all talking in Fairyland. "It made me rather sad the other day," said the Queen of the Fairies, "when I noticed that a little girl felt quite jealous of her baby brother."

"Will You Miss Me?"

"She had received all the attention before and now she received hardly any at all. The baby brother received it all. She had to give up things if he wanted them and cried for them, and it did seem a little unfair."

"I really could understand that it was hard for her. She felt as though she were no longer loved as she had been loved."

"But after a time she understood that the little brother wasn't really loved more than she was loved, nor had he come to take her place."

"He was simply another to love, too, and her family had room in their hearts to love her just as much, though he was being loved too."

"I felt very sad about her jealousy at first, even though I understood it a little. But her mother talked to her and explained it all to her."

"Her mother was so understanding. She did not cold the little girl, nor tell her that she should be ashamed of herself. The mother understood, and so everything turned out ever so happily."

"I saw something so funny the other day," said Fairy Princess Twilight-Bell.

"Lucy and Caroline, who live next door to each other, were saying goodbye to each other."

"Lucy was going away on a little visit. They hugged and kissed each other and asked each other:

"Will you miss me?" "I did this again and again!"

"I saw the two little bears, Blondie and Brunette," said Fairy Yvonne. "They were living in the camp, but soon they are going to be bad for the winter."

"A little girl from the city was at the camp and she said:

"Oh, dear, they are so cunning, I wish I could take them home with me."

"But the owner of the bears said: 'I'm afraid you would block the traffic if you took them to the city, for people would think you were a bear tamer with a private show of your own.'"

"Besides, it is bedtime now for them."

"I saw a dog named Cinder the other day," said Fairy Princess Joy.

"He was so named because he used to love to lie in the cinders and ashes early in the morning."

"There was when the fire was out, and before a new fire had been kindled, it was still a little warm and cozy in the early morning."

"He had come to this house uninvited in the first place, but he had been given a home there and now he was one of the family."

"I saw," said the Dream Fairy, "the little Mahalia the other day."

"She was announcing to all her friends that winter had come, as she had seen ice for the first time in the river."

"And I heard a little girl giving invitations for her birthday party," said the Wishing Fairy.

"Her mother had told her not to tell any one that it would be her birthday, as then the invited guests would all feel they had to bring presents."

"So she went around and invited her friends, and she ended off each invitation by saying:

"And mother says I'm not to tell you it will be my birthday, for then she says you'll think you have to bring presents and you don't have to do that unless you want to bring them."

"And they laughed in Fairyland over this!"

OLD-FASHIONED PUDDINGS

Though we in this age are not so fond of our recipes as the good old grandmothers were, handing them down to their daughters, holding them as precious legacies, which they were; in sharing them we lose nothing, and add to the wealth of cherished knowledge of other housewives, which they in turn will pass on.

Pineapple Pudding.—Take a can of good canned pineapple grates, drain as dry as possible, add its weight in sugar, if the fresh pineapple is used, and one-half the weight in butter, creamed together and added to the pineapple. Add six beaten eggs and a cupful of cream. Bake with or without a pastry shell.

Nottingham Pudding.—Peel six good flavored apples, core and fill the cavities with sugar, pour over a light batter prepared as follows: Beat four eggs with four tablespoonfuls of flour, add gradually three-fourths of a cupful of milk and a little salt. Bake one hour in a moderate oven.

Southern Snowballs.—Take the cores from as many apples as desired and fill the cavities with minced lemon peel and sugar. Allow two tablespoonfuls of rice to each apple, tie tight enough in a cloth so that the rice will cover the apple, yet with room enough for the rice to swell. Serve them with cream and a grating of nutmeg. Do the pudding one hour.

Sweet Potato Pudding.—To three pounds of boiled potatoes put through a sieve add three pints of milk, an egg, butter, cinnamon, nutmeg and mace to taste, with a teaspoonful of salt. Half the recipe, using six eggs, makes a pudding of good size.

Carrot Pudding.—To one-half pound of grated carrot add one pound of bread crumbs. Beat six eggs well, add half a grated nutmeg and mix well; then add a pint of cream and two ounces of sugar or sugar to taste. The carrot may be put through the meat grinder. Steam two hours. Serve with any desired sauce.

OLIVE BRIDGE.
Olive Bridge, Nov. 20.—A very cold wave hit this place Sunday evening, which makes people begin to think winter is coming.

Edwin Guesner, who has sold his farm to parties from Long Island, has bought a building lot of L. B. Davis and has his well nearly finished.

The annual oyster supper of Shokan Lodge, No. 491, I. O. O. F., will be held on Thanksgiving eve, November 26. A big time and a big feed is expected.

Brooks North at this writing is about the same and under the care of Dr. Bush.

Mrs. McGraft, who purchased a building lot of Arthur Fero, has not started to build yet.

Roast Pork at Woodstock.
The ladies of the Dutch Reformed Church of Woodstock will serve a hot roast pork supper on Thanksgiving night, November 27, in the basement of the church. There will also be a booth consisting of fancy articles and aprons for the ladies and good homemade candy for the young folks. Supper will be served from 6:30 until all are served. DAVE'S

ANNOUNCING A MATTER OF PLAIN TRUTH TALK, ENTITLED

IT'S COLD

By U. SEDA MOUTHFUL.

FOLKS IT SURE IS COLD and I don't mean maybe. When I crawled under the sheets last night, I thanked my stars that I had bought a pair of those Flannel Pajamas that DAVE is selling for $1.98. And in the morning, don't you think that I don't feel happy in the Bathrobe I got over to his place. I don't remember what I paid for it, but it's well worth any price. I think he's got three or four different priced ones.

When I got out of that bed, it sure was cold and I was glad I had changed into that suit of Winter Underwear I bought at DAVE'S. When I was buying them, he showed such a large assortment of winter underwear that I had no trouble at all in picking out a set.

You know I enjoy buying at DAVE'S. When I go there, I stay longer than I expect. Gee, you're struck at once by the good fellowship that pervades the store. You see women from the county coming in to rest. You see men from different sections of the county meeting here. EVERYONE IS WELCOME. People bring their bundles and leave them here while they go out to eat. You'll see DAVE going around greeting people and the clerks are all helpful with information.

One thing, when you buy something at DAVE'S you know you can always bring it back and go away satisfied. Why the other day I saw a man walk in with an overcoat and begin to argue with a clerk. DAVE walked over and found out that the man did not like the coat after he had gotten home. IN FIVE MINUTES he walked out of the store satisfied and happy, wearing a New Overcoat. That's the way DAVE does business.

And talking about Overcoats, he sure has some "Peacherinos" over to his place. I don't know what style is, but I know that if anyone goes in to buy a coat, and don't get one there, he won't get one in any place.

He's got quality at everyone's price. Do you want to hear what DAVE says, Listen: "Folks, I sell Overcoats at prices that can't be beat. I won't tell you that I sell below cost. I don't. I make my profit, but it's very little. All I ask is to give me a chance to show you what I can do. You do your part and I'll do mine."

Well, good-night, folks, I hope you've enjoyed this talk as much as the suit I'm wearing. I bought it at DAVE'S and I can't wear it out.

Now read this letter of thanks from Mr. Kane. It speaks for itself. Remember, it is because Kellogg's Bran is ALL bran that it was so effective in his case—just as it has been in thousands of others. Only ALL bran can produce 100 per cent results.

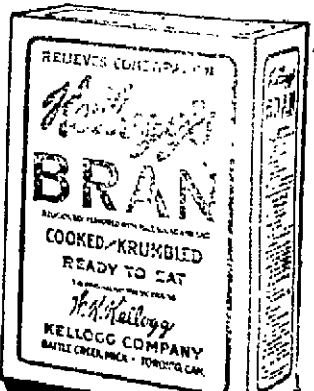

My dear friend:
Imagine a young man weighing 165 pounds in bed, a weakling weighing 94 pounds. An elderly lady whom I knew since I was a lad paid me what she thought was a last visit. Upon being told of my plight she immediately mentioned your product for such an ailment. Maybe some of us didn't look at her views very lightly... it was laugh!

My dear friend, I was laughing... not at your product but because I am able to, I am telling you and the world at large, "Eat Kellogg's Bran!" It should be called "a man's best friend." I love you for your gratitude. I can talk, and whenever the opportunity presents itself, my mouth is always full of bran—Kellogg's Bran! Wishing you countless days of progress, I am Showing Design Providing for Use of a Type "C" Baldwin Phone and a Three-Inch Diaphragm. Could Be Modified for Other Combinations.

By A. V. LOUGHREN

Before taking up the actual design details of a loud-speaker, which may be adapted from a standard phone unit, it is instructive to study the several types of loud speakers which are on the market. These fall, naturally, into three classes:

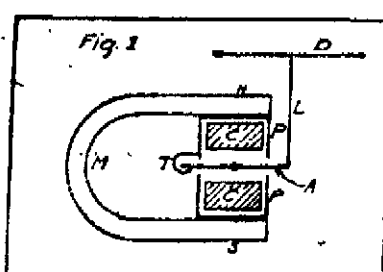

- (a) The magnetic diaphragm type.
- (b) The moving coil type.
- (c) The "Baldwin" type.

The magnetic diaphragm type is of very common occurrence. It is essentially similar to the ordinary head phone, having a permanent magnet whose poles are placed close to the diaphragm. A magnet coil carrying many turns of fine wire is mounted on each pole of the permanent magnet. When no current is passing through the coils the iron diaphragm is, nevertheless, attracted by the permanent magnet. If a direct current is sent through the coils in the direction which strengthens the permanent magnet the diaphragm is pulled down more, and with current in the opposite direction it is pulled less strongly and springs up a little bit. Thus, with an alternating current, which flows first in one direction, then in other, the diaphragm is pulled down, then partially released, and in this way sound waves are produced.

This construction, properly handled, will lead to a very satisfactory loud speaker. But it has its drawbacks for the constructor, as he must secure a perfectly smooth iron diaphragm of a larger diameter than usual. Also it is essential that the diaphragm be mounted in the proper relation to the poles of the magnet.

The Moving Coil Type.

The moving coil type is represented by the Magnavox instruments. Here a small coil, very light in construction, is fastened to the diaphragm. This coil is suspended in the magnetic field of a strong electro-magnet. The magnet consists of a large number of turns of wire on an iron core. A small current, usually somewhere near 0.5 ampere, is drawn from a battery of the receiving set to excite this magnet. Now, when an alternating current flows through the suspended coil the effect of the magnetic field is to make the coil move up and down, thus causing the diaphragm to vibrate as in the other type. So far as I know, there is no head phone on the market of this type.

What I have called the "Baldwin" type is a loud speaker using a Baldwin phone, or an adaptation of it. Figure 1 shows the fundamental construction of this instrument. In the actual commercial product certain changes are made for compactness which are not shown because of difficulty of reproduction. In the figure: M is the permanent magnet, with north and south poles at N and S, respectively. P, P are the two pole pieces, between which the armature A is suspended. The armature is pivoted at its center. At its right end the lever L is fastened, and it is by this that the motion of the armature is communicated to the diaphragm D. At the other end of the armature a small spring T is provided to maintain a slight tension on the diaphragm. The coil C is wound large enough to leave the armature room to vibrate within it, yet small enough to fit inside the pole pieces.

The operation is as follows: When a current flows in the coil C the armature is thereby magnetized, one end becoming a north pole, the other south. Now, each pole piece is magnetized throughout by the permanent magnet; the upper being north, the lower south. And since like poles repel, while unlike ones attract, the end of the armature which has become the north pole will tend to move up, while the other will at the same time try to move down. Thus, both will contribute to exert a force on the diaphragm and to move it in accordance with the current.

Cause of "Chattering."

Practically, the Baldwin phone is very satisfactory as a headphone, but sometimes fails to deliver sufficient volume, when operated as a loud speaker, without "chattering." Chattering is caused by sending so much current through the coil that the armature strikes the pole pieces as it swings. This distorts the sounds badly, as it prevents the diaphragm from responding fully to the current.

There are two methods of decreasing this tendency to chatter. First, a horn may be placed in front of the diaphragm. Under this condition the diaphragm has to move a much longer column of air with it, and hence a given current will not produce as much swing of the armature, thus lessening the chattering. The second method is to increase the size of the diaphragm, so it must again move more air, which results in less chattering, as before. These methods may be used independently, or together. There is at least one loud-speaker on the market using a Baldwin phone attached to a plaster "horn," with the standard size diaphragm. At the other extreme, I know of a speaker one man built, using the stretched head of a banjo-mandolin as the diaphragm, no horn at all being used.

It is probably better to combine the two methods if a large sound output is desired. To do this satisfactorily, the new diaphragm must be supported in the proper position relative to the rest of the phone. A small brass frame is best used for this purpose. Drawings for such a frame are reproduced herewith. The parts consist of two disks, a bar and the necessary machine screws, bushings, etc. This particular design is for a type "C" Baldwin phone and a three-inch diaphragm. It could be modified for other combinations.

Description of Parts.

The parts may be best described by taking up the assembly of the device. Disk A is 3 1/2 inches in diameter, with four holes around the outside through which machine screws pass to hold A and B together. There is a deep groove turned in A as shown, in which a piece of fine rubber tubing is laid to form one support for the diaphragm. This groove is deep enough so that the diaphragm will be very close to A. A one-half-inch or five-eighths-inch hole is drilled at the center of the disk for the sound to come out. The horn used must come to this size at the small end without any sudden changes in size, and must be firmly attached. No specific directions regarding the horn will be given, as some will wish to mount the unit directly on a phonograph tone-arm, while others will prefer a regular horn. Disk B is also 3 1/2 inches in diameter, and is tapped to receive the machine screws which hold A. B carries a somewhat shallower groove opposite that in A, in which a second piece of rubber tubing is laid to form the other support for the diaphragm. A 2-inch or 2 1/2-inch hole is cut in the center of B, as the air must not be confined behind the diaphragm. The bar C is fastened to B in the same way as A is. The Baldwin phone unit is removed from its case and fastened to C by small bolts through the holes s, s. The lever connecting the armature to the diaphragm goes through the hole t. The brass used should be quite thick, say between 0.08 inch and 0.125 inch.

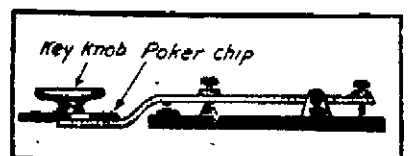

It is necessary, of course, to remove the old diaphragm from the Baldwin phone, and the old lever.

Mica diaphragms may be purchased already cut to size, and one-eighth-inch rubber tubing is also easily purchased.—New York Sun.

Device Is Improvement

Over Regular Key Knob

A common key knob can be made into a navy type knob by using an ordinary poker chip. The poker chip is drilled in the center so that the screw on the key knob will pass through readily. It is then inserted between the regular knob and the frame of the key and the knob screwed down tightly. Care should be taken when drilling the poker chip as it is liable to crumble or break. The drill should, therefore, be turned very slowly in the process to make a neat hole. Besides giving the key an excellent appearance, this simple device is a great improvement over the regular key knob as it will be found that sending is easier with it.

A Reminder

OUR wife means everything to you, Mr. Man, and good dressing means a lot to your wife.

It is as little as you can do, to let her have the becoming things she sets her heart on, isn't it?

Remember, she is YOUR wife! You would not have her suffer by comparison with other men's wives.

But all men are a bit forgetful. Too busy making a living to think of clothes at all.

In thinking of them now, just remember that the cost of keeping your wife presentable may be much less than you actually imagine. A great deal depends on where she makes her selections.

"Tickled to Death"

The expression "tickled to death," says the Literary Digest, is a Britishism, for away back in 1684, when characterizing the vices of the times, Bishop Hall wrote: "The flatterer's art is nothing but a delightful cozenage, whose rules are smoothing, and guarded with perjury; whose scope is to make men foolish, in touching them to overvalue themselves, and to tickle his friends to death."

Waterproofing Wood

The forest products laboratory knows of no treatment which will absolutely waterproof wood. Thorough treatment with coal-tar creosote will reduce the tendency to change moisture content to some extent, but will not prevent such changes. As a measure to prevent decay waterproofing is not necessary and thorough treatment with coal-tar creosote will be satisfactory.

Soft Drinks Traced to American Revolution

There is an interesting story about how the first soft drinks happened to be made.

Back in the days of the American Revolution a man named Townsend Speakman was running a little drug store in Philadelphia. He supplied medicines for Washington's army, and was pretty well known. One day, says a writer in the Progressive Grocer, a doctor asked him to fill a prescription of carbonated water. Drugstore Speakman succeeded in compounding the concoction. The doctor's patient liked the new water. Soon, one patient after another passed the word around and, before long, Druggist Speakman had lots of calls for the new medicine water.

But Druggist Speakman was a keen business man and conceived the idea of favoring the medicine water with fruit juices to increase its popularity. The plan worked. Its popularity spread like wildfire. That was the beginning of the carbonated soft drink business.

The soft drink business has been growing ever since. Last year, for example, the people in the United States consumed 3,000,000 bottles of non-alcoholic beverages, an average of 75 bottles for every man, woman and child.

Scientist's Explanation
by No Means Flattering

A spiritualist, who also was something of an orator, visited a town where a skeptical scientist lived, and delivered a lecture one afternoon. The lecturer's desire being to convert the scientist to his belief. The audience was large, including the scientist, who had attended by special invitation.

The next day the spiritualist called on the scientist with hope that his effort had been successful. "What did you think of my lecture?" he asked.

"Well," said the scientist, "I couldn't sleep last night at all, and I lay it to your talk."
The spiritualist was highly flattered. "I knew my argument would make you think," he said. "Is it not so?"
"I am not so certain about that. Whenever I sleep during the day I cannot sleep at night."—Los Angeles Times.

City in Darkness, Rob Post Office

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Hornell, N. Y., Nov. 20.—While the city was suddenly plunged into darkness by a ten minute power shut off, the Hornell post office Tuesday evening was robbed of a package containing more than $2,000 it was revealed today. The package, consigned to a local bank, disappeared while mail was being sorted. Another package containing $10,000 was untouched. Post office inspectors are working on two theories—that a thief sneaked in under cover of the darkness or that the unexplained nature of the lights was part of the robbery plot. No arrests have been made.

Young Farmer Surely Played in Hard Luck

"A young farmer had been somewhat too much of a general lover before he settled upon one sweetheart in particular, but this time he was truly attached to his Emily. It was about a month before the wedding, on a moonless night, and as he led a white heifer past the public house the door suddenly opened and a man stumbled out into the road, a little confused in his brain by too much beer. Now, this reveler, on returning home, endeavored, like many another husband, to placate his wife by offering her a scrap of gossip—he had just seen that young So-and-so walking out with somebody in white, and it wasn't the right girl, because she was at Doncaster."

"Next morning the wife, of course, told a neighbor, and the neighbor passed it on to the mother of the prospective bride, and, though the fiancé was able to explain everything, the girl thought, on the whole, she would prefer to have a young man who could lead anything home at night—plain or colored—without giving rise to talk."

—From "What I Have Gathered," by J. F. Buckrose.

Scored on the Orator

The atmosphere was getting slightly heated in the village hall, where the candidate for office was addressing a meeting of those who he hoped would vote for him at the next election.

One man in the crowd was determined not to give the aspirant a moment's peace, and he didn't. At last the speaker lost his last remnant of patience and, shaking his fist at the heckler, he shouted:

"I look upon you, sir as a confounded rascal."

"Quite," replied the interrupter, with a sweet smile. "You are perfectly at liberty to look upon me in any character you desire to assume."

Have You This Habit?

By Margaret Morison

MIRRORS

ONE day the professor began to notice how many mirrors there are in New York City, and how many people make use of them. There was a drug store round the corner from the professor's home where, up above the soda water fountain, hung a wide glass. As young America drew in orangeade through a straw, or consumed his raspberry crush, or her chocolate fudge sundae, he might observe the straight line of his part—she might see the most becoming angle at which to hold her spoon.

Again, walking down the avenue, the professor noticed that not all who gazed in the plate glass fronts were seeing merchandise. For furtively one stout dowager would glance at the long lines of her size-reducing draperies. Another little, fantastic, well-dressed shop-walker would flick out her short skirts, peering back admiringly over her shoulder at her reflection. Or a mannish, superior lady would finger until no one was in sight, and then smile with appreciation at herself. The more expert in deed, might seem to look through while looking in, but eventually a hand would reach up to the top of a shoulder and move a lock of hair.

The other night the professor was waiting for his train on a crowded subway platform. There was a woman one of those conventionally placed chewing gum slot machines, each of which had a twelve-inch mirror set in above the push-button. Before it a very tall man was bending and boxing quite honestly and entirely unconsciously he was rearranging his collar and smoothing his hair. He had placed his packages on the shelf under which the chewing gum is taken. His hat he had hung on one of the pegs. After taking off his tie, he requested the button at his neck, made a new bow, and then he turned and palm taking the piece of comb and brush, he parted and smoothed his hair to his satisfaction, and put his hat on again at the platform. Finally he pressed a button in the slot and went off a man.

The whole decided the professor that he was a disappointing habit. It leads to self-consciousness, and self-consciousness once fastened upon you, never helps you—the do it cannot. Look long and carefully and critically at yourself in your own glass before you go forth from your own room. Then forget what manner of man or woman you are—or would be for the rest is upon the knees of the gods.

The re-opening of the Methodist Church will take place on Sunday morning, November 23rd. The Rev. Dr. Wright, district superintendent of the Newburgh District, will be present and assist in the evening service. As is well known, an extensive work of repair, redecoration, and building has been accomplished for the Methodist Church, under the able leadership of the pastor, the Rev. George Weber. The kitchen was financed by the Ladies' Aid Society. The redecoration of the Sunday school room, laying of new floor and platform, and adding of a primary room, was the special work of the Builders' Class of the Sunday school. The fine concrete block outside the doors of the Sunday school room and kitchen was financed by the Primary Department under the leadership of Mrs. John Palen. The remainder of the work is under the special patronage of the official board of the church. The work is now completed and ready for inspection by all. Rally Day exercises will be held in the Methodist Sunday school on Sunday morning beginning at ten o'clock. A large attendance is expected.

Fabric Glove Has Milady's Approval

Pleasing Handcovering May Be Had in Fancy and Plain Modes.

The fabric glove has gained a new prestige for the autumn, says a correspondent in the Christian Science Monitor. It appears now in fancy as well as plain modes and shows a beauty of texture and style that is worthy of almost any street or afternoon costume.

Never before, say those who make a particular study of glove seasons, has there been such an expert imitation of French suede. Even the prices of suede gloves have been inflated, you may say upon first inquiry. But the new fabric gloves, while more expensive than ever, have an enviable advantage—they can be washed in soap and water. Furthermore, as a second examination of them will show, the material and workmanship combine in giving a far more refined effect than past fabric creations have suggested.

They can be bought in the prevailing glove colors of the season—gray and beige with the many intermediate shades. It is the slightly decorative types that are the most attractive perhaps, and certainly the more expensive. A model in light beige with chocolate brown stitching on the back and a narrow turn-back cuff trimmed with metal cloth has reason to be a promising favorite. The colors are unostentatious but effective. This is one of the finer groups and one is almost tempted to doubt the saleswoman's explanation that the material is not suede and rub an appraising finger over it to make sure.

Another "true to type" model is an all gray glove. This has a scalloped cuff edged with a half-inch plating of the same. The fabric is a soft dark shade of gray, quite like the familiar shade in suede gloves but proof against many mishaps according to reputation. More ornate than either of these is a lighter gray with sky-blue trim on the cuff which would go appropriately with dresses of more delicate materials.

Wrist-length gloves and short-sleeved dresses continue to be acceptable among autumn fashions. The button gloves in French suede and fabric will be very popular this winter.

For the business woman there are new qualities and varieties of a glove that was created for time-saving purposes. It has three names—the slip-on, the pull-on and the Biarritz glove—the last name coming from the French town where the fabric is manufactured. Of gauntlet length, without snaps or straps, this glove has a flare sufficiently wide to take in a medium sized coat cuff and a wrist sufficiently narrow to wrinkle not too loosely. The slip-on glove is available in French kid, suede, buckskin, doeskin and chamamois, besides an inexpensive model in fabric.

While the novelty gloves are called for quite as frequently as ever, the novelties on the whole, are of a less conspicuous nature. A few elaborate styles in better gloves for those who prefer them can be bought at some of the stores, and some of these, provided the costume and occasion warrant are very pleasing. Embroidered, hand-painted and stenciled cuff designs are found in this group. One pair of old ivory-colored French kid, with turn-back cuffs of navy-blue moire silk, with tiny flowers hand painted in old rose will probably appeal to those who like styles that are ornate and yet tasteful.

White Brushed Alpaca Used for This Sweater

Since knitted wear is popular for the cool days, this striking sweater of white brushed alpaca should gain favor. It is trimmed with broad bands of peasant embroidery.

New Organdie Collar

The modified Medici collar is seen on some of the autumn gowns. It is a stiff white organdie, in two parts. One part stands up high about the ears and the other lies flat on the neck. It is tied around the middle with a black ribbon.

Miniature Railroad

Partly as a hobby and also to solve hauling problems on his country estate, a New York man after five years' work, has finished a 14-inch "vest pocket" railroad system, two miles long.

Bengaline Made Into Chic Afternoon Frock

This attractive frock for afternoon wear is of soft colored bengaline, one of the popular fabrics of the season.

New Fabrics Colorful; Not Bizarre or Crude

Whether or not the influence the mode on whether fashion determines the fabric is hard to say, observes a writer in the Kansas City Star, but the must be cooperation between those who create the modes and those who design and manufacture fabrics in order to achieve the perfect results that are demanded by the fashionable woman of today.

It always seems as though the materials of a new season are lovelier than those of previous ones. Each year colors are more skillfully and subtly blended, designs are more ingeniously executed and textures more upple. This is apparently is to witness a decided vogue of velvet, and few fabrics are more startlingly beautiful than the printed or broadened velvets. The color effects are quite extraordinary and are brilliant without being bizarre or crude. Rich shades of blue and tangerine, turquoise, coral and the varied tones of green so popular at the moment, as well as a new shade of cranberry, are shown in both printed and plain velvets.

Metal cloths as soft and pliable as satin are among the novelties of the new season and are used for evening frocks. They are especially lovely when combined with metal laces.

Of decidedly plebeian origin, cretonne nevertheless makes its appearance in the realm of evening clothes, but it is glorified almost beyond recognition by the use of metal thread embroidery and crystal and silver beads. One of the new evening coats is made of cretonne which has the entire background filled in with stitches of gold thread. The pattern is left untouched, but is outlined with tiny crystal and silver beads. The lining of taupe velvet matches the collar and cuffs of taupe fox.

MOST VISITED ENGLISH CITY

Liverpool, However, Is Least Known of All by Travelers.

Washington.—The last city to have its civic week at the Wembley Empire exhibition was Liverpool.

"And Liverpool," says a bulletin from the National Geographic society, has seen more visiting Americans than any other English city, while, it is safe to say, these Americans saw less of Liverpool than they did of any other place in Europe.

"They know that the city has miles and miles of docks; that the world in general unloads upon these docks vast quantities of raw materials, no mean part of which are the cargoes of grain, cattle, cotton, tobacco and meats from the United States. They also know that the busy factories of Lancashire, Yorkshire and the Midlands converge their wares upon these docks, pouring out into the world commerce stream shiploads of woven linen, woolen and cotton, machinery and metals.

"The flags of sixty steamship lines which ply in and out of Liverpool were on display at Wembley. Two other features of the exhibit were horses and art treasures.

"The Liverpool dray horses are famous. Never ending lines of trucks drawn by these handsome, massive animals move along Liverpool's streets between docks and warehouses and railway stations. The trucks are the type known as 'lorries,' which originated in this city.

"Annually the city has a spring carnival at which parades of the horses form a principal attraction. At Wembley one Liverpool horse is reported to have registered a pull of 21 tons and then, with a second horse, to have exceeded the capacity of the register, which was 29 tons.

"Coal-Smoked Greek Architecture."
"The art treasures were from Liverpool's museum, wherein may be found a gallery of paintings, an aquarium and a public library. The most beautiful building in the city, however, is not the museum, but St. George's hall, which, even though it has been called a place of 'coal-smoked Greek architecture,' is impressive for its fine, simple and dignified lines. It was the conception of a twenty-four-year-old architect.

"One of the notable collections of the museum is that of Joseph Mayer, a silversmith, and in this collection is a box of silver coins with a label bearing an interesting story. When the juvenile Joseph was walking with a relative in the fields one day, a plow-man turned up several coins. The relative offered the boy a reward if he would decipher the inscriptions. The boy earned that reward and became so interested in relics of that sort that he became a distinguished antiquary.

"Liverpool once was a city of slums but, even before the World war, the city corporation had begun tearing down unsanitary dwellings and putting up low-price tenements for its workers. There are more than 25,000 dock workers here and more unskilled labor and racial strains than in any other city of England. It has an abundance of parks and many of these are partly given over to the ancient game of outdoor bowling, which flourishes here as it does nowhere else in England.

"A novel sight, akin to the old-time cub market in New York, is the spot known as the 'Exchange Flags,' where port merchants transact much of their business during seemingly casual meetings. Liverpool also has a famous institution, the Seamen's orphanage, known to sea travelers because many of the great liners carry an 'orphanage box' to collect funds for this institution, and some of them give entertainments for its benefit.

"Geography played an unmistakable part in the fate of Liverpool. It is located three miles from the open sea, up the Mersey river, which widens from a width of less than a mile into a three-mile wide basin. King John founded a town here, but even in the early thirteenth century when its first dock was built, it had only 5,000 people. It engaged in slave traffic with the Spanish Main and played a stellar part in the romantic days of smuggling of rum, sugar and tobacco. Its prosperity really began in 1840, with the establishment of regular steamship service between the Old world and the New.

"Port of Many Immigrants."
"One of its principal articles of export to America, up until the time of the World war, were our immigrant citizens. It was a pioneer port of English emigration and, in addition, many of the American immigrants from Spain, France, Russia, Poland and the Baltic region embarked here.

"There are nearly two score consulates in Liverpool; that of the United States, it will be recalled, was distinguished by the service of Nathaniel Hawthorne. The Gladstone family have lived here for generations. William Ewart Gladstone was born here, and relatives still are active in the city's affairs.

"Birkenhead, across the Mersey, is a busy city and would be known as an important port in its own right, even if it were divested from its overhaidowing neighbor. Though there is a tunnel connection, the ferries between the two cities constitute the business in England."

Edelweiss Not Uncommon
The error that edelweiss grows only in the haunts of the chamolais amon.
The Alps is a common one, says the London Times, but it grows in hidden places in Brompton churchyard, an other place.

CORONET MADE BY NOTED GOLDSMITH NOW FOR SALE

Ancient Head Decoration Is Discovered on Counter in London Antiquary Shop.

London.—The market for coronets is not what it used to be in England. Repeating in a Mayfair antiquary's shop is a perfectly good one waiting to be restored to its rightful owner, or go under the hammer to the highest bidder, although neither seems likely to appear.

This particular piece of all but obsolete headgear has had a strange history and has been sold and resold by all sorts of people, many of whom didn't even know that it was a coronet.
Its present owner had it from a man who offered it for sale as a "potato ring," a product of the old Irish goldsmiths of the Seventeenth century and earlier.

But when it was polished up it was found to be a sample of the work of Paul Storr, the greatest London goldsmith of the last century, and the hall-mark shows that it undoubtedly was made for the coronation of King George IV.

At the coronation of the late King Edward fully two-thirds of the peers present were without coronets. The war also has intervened, bringing greater democracy in the manners and the exercise of their prerogatives by peers.

The late Lord Aylesbury of "Pelican club" memories, once confessed that one of his first acts when he came into the family possessions was to pawn the ancestral coronet, and he never took the trouble to redeem it.
"What on earth do I want with a coronet?" he used to ask.

Finds More WomenEntering Industries

Washington.—The last decade has seen the industrial problems of women become more conspicuous than ever before.

Their full importance, however, can not be known unless certain questions are first answered: Women in industry. Where do they work? What do they do? Has their number increased or decreased during the last few years? The replies to many of these questions are to be found in several bulletins on occupational statistics recently issued by the federal bureau of the census.

Increases occurred in the number of women who were clerks in offices, stenographers and typists, bookkeepers and cashiers, teachers, saleswomen, telephone operators, trained nurses and clerks in stores. Decreases occurred in the number recorded as farm laborers, cooks, general servants, laun-dresses, dressmakers and seamstresses (not in factory), and milliners and millinery dealers.

In manufacturing and mechanical industries increases are found among semi-skilled operatives in food, iron and steel and clothing industries, in silk and knitting mills and in electrical supply, shoe and cigar and tobacco factories; among laborers in cotton mills, and among forewomen and overseers in manufacturing. The most striking increase is that for operatives in automobile factories, among whom there has been an increase of 1,408 per cent. Men operatives in these factories increased only 435.4 per cent.

Movement to GatherAll Lepers at Culion

Manila.—More than 300 lepers detained in various parts of the Philippines are held under conditions neither sanitary, humane nor safe to the public at large, according to an urgent communication sent by Vice Governor Eugene A. Gilmore to the secretary of commerce and communications.

Mr. Gilmore requests that a coast guard vessel be made available immediately for the purpose of collecting these lepers from the various islands and transporting them to Culion island, the leper colony.

According to the report of Dr. Jose Avelino, chief of the Culion leper colony, 5,108 persons are confined there, four of whom are Americans. The colony consists of 2,437 men, 1,318 women, 802 boys and 496 girls. There are 1,134 single and 2,350 married lepers, 287 widows and 1,298 children.

Not in Dictionary

In the good old days when science was still in its infancy, which was not so long ago, scientists were firmly convinced that the various atoms of a given element were absolutely identical with each other and quite immune from any transformation whatever.
The very name, from the Greek, means indivisible. This view has recently been shattered by the investigations and developments of radio activity.
The isotope has taken its place as the smallest particle. The word is not in the dictionary yet. It is of Greek origin and signifies "that which is in

Two Babies Were Offered for Sale

S. C. A. County Agent for Dependent Children Rescues Two Forlorn Infants Held for a Board Bill After Being Abandoned by Parents.

New York, Nov. 21.—The offering of two babies for sale—a boy for $100, and a girl for $40—in an up-state county was reported today by Miss H. Ida Curry, Supt. of the Department of County Agencies for Dependent Children of the State Charities Aid Association.

Miss Curry received the news from one of the Association's county agents for dependent children, whose duties as executive of county children's committees are to assist public authorities in investigating the circumstances of orphaned or destitute children, and in making provision for them.

The babies in question were placed by their mothers in a children's boarding home. When their parents abandoned them and no money was forthcoming to pay for their maintenance, the woman in charge of the home inserted an advertisement in a newspaper, offering the children for sale. She was holding them as security for the board bill, and offered them for adoption to any person who would pay $100 due on the boy, and $40 due on the girl.

The local county agent for dependent children noticed the advertisement and called at the home. As a result of the conditions disclosed, the permit for keeping the home, which had been granted by the local health department, was revoked, and suitable family homes were found for the children, while the agent located the parents who abandoned the babies.

"This incident, startling as it may seem," said Miss Curry, "does not reveal worse neglect or abuse of children than is frequently found in various counties of the state, due to ignorance or depravity. The association's county agents for dependent children constantly unearth serious conditions, and their assistance in making investigations for the public authorities, and in devising the most advantageous ways to care for them is an important factor in the care of needy children in many counties. The usefulness of the children's agents in discovering such conditions and in helping to correct them, is increasingly recognized by citizens and by public authorities."

THE WHY, WHEN AND WHERE OF FASHIONS.

On the Heels of Fashion.
The ancient Greek actors wore the first high heels, because they found it desirable to appear to be taller in order to be easier seen. High heels have been fashionable at intervals ever since; as a rule, every time skirts were wide and long.
About 1690 when Louis XIV began to settle down in a respectable circle of family life, shoes for gala occasions were of a sort of black patent leather with scarlet heels, accusations made against the unhappy queen was that she had too many pairs of shoes. Yet she has done something which few working girls would do nowadays. Her household accounts show that since 1788 several of her silk slippers were rebound on the edge and thus worn.

The Revolution almost entirely eliminated high heels, but they came back only after the middle of the XIX century. Sensations of ephemeral character appeared, usually from the stage or the demi-monde. One beauty wore indolent glass heels; another had them studded with rubies or diamonds, or covered them with snakeskin.
At the moment, ornamental heels are distinctly in favor for evening. (Fairchild Fashion Service.)

New Castleton
"Cut-Off" OpenedBridge Across Hudson and New Freight Yards at Selkirk, Costing $25,000,000 Altogether, Begin to Operate as Part of Huge Time-Saving System.The new $25,000,000 Castleton
"cut-off" was formally opened on Thursday when high officials from various railroad systems of the country and well known financiers were present and inspected the completed system.The bridge across the Hudson river at Castleton, erected at a cost of $10,000,000, will be one of the greatest economies in the country.
By the erection of this bridge across the river, east and west bound freight will be sent to its destination in the minimum of time and at a great saving. The Selkirk terminal yards, six miles long, built at a cost of $15,000,000, will permit classification of freight on its 110 miles of track with a minimum of loss. Connecting trackage amounting to 47.4 miles has been constructed to connect this yard with main lines. The cost of grading and laying out the yards is but a small item in comparison to the amount of labor and time which will be saved through the system. The Selkirk yards are the largest in the world.New Yards Relieve Congestion.
By the completion of the Selkirk yards, which will be for freight classification and which will not interfere with passenger traffic, the crowded condition of the West Albany yards will be relieved. Freight traffic to and from the east over the Boston and Albany tracks will be diverted from around Albany and will cross the river on the Castleton bridge and be handled through the Selkirk yards. All freight except that destined for Albany and northern points will pass through the new yards, and swing around Albany, eliminating the West Albany grade and the expense of operating the pusher engines. It is also expected that the yards will greatly relieve congestion on both sides of the Maiden Lane and Livingston avenue bridges across the river at Albany.Kingston-Albany Route Unchanged.
Passenger traffic from Kingston to Albany will not be interfered with and trains will depart and arrive on the same time. The same route will be taken by passenger trains as in the past except that they will run over new trackage for some distance.
The Castleton "cut-off" will permit freight traffic to cross the Hudson river over the new bridge which connects directly with the Boston & Albany railroad at Niverville. Freight for the west will be sentover the bridge by a connecting line direct into the Selkirk yards. East bound traffic will pass from the yards over the bridge and enter directly on the Boston and Albany road.Connection With Central.
At the east end of the bridge another line will run south, connecting with the main line of the New York Central Hudson river division at Stonyview. This will no longer make it necessary for freight traffic over the Central to cross the river at Albany or pass through the congested west Albany yards and up the steep grade of the West Albany hill where a pusher engine was required.West Shore Connections.
The new Selkirk yards are between the village of Selkirk and Peura Bush and connect again with the old line of the West Shore near Unionville. Freight passing over the West Shore road will pass through the new yards, leaving the road at Ravena bound north and again connecting with the old line after passing through the Selkirk yards. South bound traffic will pass through the Selkirk yards and join the West Shore old line again at Ravena coming in over the new West Shore connection.Last Saturday morning officials of the Central, West Shore and Boston & Albany roads witnessed the laying of the last rails at Unionville and Ravena which connect the three systems by the high level bridge at Castleton and which joins the three railroads in the world's largest freight classification yards.2,000 Employees in New Yard.
According to railroad officials more than 2,000 men will be employed in the new yards when they are put in full use. Many of the employees at the West Albany yards will probably be transferred to the Selkirk yards.
Several motor busses were recently purchased by the railroad company to carry employees back and forth to Albany. The first bus was put in commission Saturday.A special train of 15 cars left the Albany Union Station shortly after 9 o'clock today for an inspection of the new bridge and yards. This was the first train to pass over the new Castleton bridge.The official party was scheduled to return to Albany later in the day for a luncheon at the Ten Eyck Hotel with Patrick H. Crowley, president of the New York Central, presiding.
Lieutenant-Governor George R.
Lunn represented the state at the opening ceremonies.The presidents of 28 railroads were invited to make the inspection trip and nearly all were present.A WONDERFUL SHOW

Plenty of Game
For Bear HuntersCatskill Mountains Filled With Big Bears—They Become Nuisance in Some Sections—Farmers May Apply for Permission to Trap Them.Catskill Mountain bears are said to be propagating so rapidly that in some sections they have become a nuisance to farmers who are considering what are the best steps to take in order to protect their live stock.Usually the complaints against the depredations of the Catskill Mountain bears are most numerous in the summer, when the bears like to visit the vegetable gardens, but the bears' appetites seem to be insatiable and four sheep are reported by Joshua Schoonmaker of Platte Clove in the town of Hunter, Greene county, to have been killed by bears that infest Hunter Mountain and neighboring high points of the Catskills.Recently Mr. Schoonmaker set a trap on his farm, but when he went to the place a day or two later he discovered that the trap and chain had disappeared. The ground in the vicinity showed that a fierce struggle had taken place, and closer examination led to the conclusion that a bear of unusual size and strength had been trapped but had succeeded in tearing the trap from its moorings and had carried away both trap and chain. Mr. Schoonmaker followed the bear tracks for a considerable distance, but the bear was better acquainted with the mountain and proved himself a better climber, so that all trace of Bruin finally was lost. For a number of years the native black bear of the Catskill Mountains disappeared, but they returned in large numbers about fifteen years ago. In one winter thirty-four bears were killed in the town of Lexington, Greene county. Since then, good records have been made in some of the Ulster county towns in the Cats-kills, and in the past few years there have been numerous successful bear hunts in practically all sections of the Catskill Mountains.

It is still too early for the bears to seek quarters where they will hiber-nate for the winter. They are now living off the fat of the land, and the cold nights and mornings are excellent aids to their appetites. Catskill Mountain farmers are entirely willing the bears should live well, provided the living does not come from their farms. Therefore, they may ask permission to trap the bears in order to preserve their property.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga. (Adv.)

Registration Fees Changed

Heavy Cars Will Pay a Smaller Fee January First, Under New Motor Vehicle Rating—Owners Registering After July 1 Will Pay One-Half.

One of the most important changes in the new motor vehicle law, as compared with the statute in force a year ago, is the one effective January 1, dealing with a revision of the registration fees charged for cars weighing more than 3,500 pounds. This change grants relief from the apparent penalty levied on owners of cars of the Pierce-Arrow, Packard and other heavy types by making the fee per hundred pounds the same as charged lighter cars until the total weight exceeds thirty-five hundred.

For many years—and even at the present time—cars weighing less than thirty-five hundred pounds paid a fee of fifty cents per hundred. The fee for cars in excess of that weight is now seventy-five cents per hundred pounds. In other words, a car weighing 3,400 pounds would pay a fee of $17, while a car weighing 3,600 pounds would carry a charge of $27 for registration. This arrangement costs the owner nearly double the fee for the extra 200 pounds, if he happened to own the thirty-six hundred pound car.

Under that section of the law dealing with this particular feature of automobile registration, and which becomes effective January 1, 1925, the fee for all cars, other than commercial vehicles and omnibuses, is placed at fifty cents per hundred pounds for thirty-five hundred pounds or less, and seventy-five cents per hundred for each hundred pounds or major fraction thereof, in excess of thirty-five hundred. Under this arrangement the car weighing 3,400 pounds will pay a fee of $17 and the one weighing 3,600 will pay $18.25 instead of $27.

Another change effective January 1 provides for one-half of the annual registration fee if the car is registered after July 1, and one-fourth if registered after October 1.

The Obscure and Faithful

What we call illusions are often, in truth, a wider vision of past and present realities—a willing movement of a man's soul with the larger sweep of the world's forces—a movement toward a more assured end than the chances of a single life. We see human heroism broken into units and say this unit did little—might as well not have been. But in this way we might break up a great army into units; in this way we might break the sunlight into fragments, and think that this and the other might be cheaply parted with it. Let us, rather, raise a monument to the soldiers whose brave hearts only kept the ranks unbroken, and met death—a monument to the faithful who were not famous, and who are precious as the continuity of the sunbeams is precious, though some of them fall unseen and on barrenness.—George Eliot.

House Paint Once Banned

Linseed oil was first made in New York in 1715. Pigments were all imported. In New England there was much prejudice against the use of paint, it being considered a sign of worldliness and vanity.

In 1800 a clergyman in Charlestown, Mass., was hailed before the council for having the interior of his house painted, and during the ensuing 40 years there was not a painter in all New England. Still, by 1759 the use of paint had become general throughout the country, the white house with green blinds for many years being the common form of exterior painting in all parts of the United States. This manner of painting frame houses is today enjoying popularity. In fact, in some quarters this color scheme is criticized as lacking individuality.

Of Biblical Derivation

The expression "feet of clay" refers to the earthly or baser part of human nature. If a person appears to be so far above others that he or she is like a god or goddess, often some grave fault will be observed to remind others that the hero or heroine is still mortal. The expression is derived from Biblical usage; see Daniel 2, verse 33.

DON'T MISS IT!

FASHION NOT IN A BLUE MOOD.

(By Eleanor Gunn.)

There is one conspicuous omission in color from the rich and varied offerings of the fall season. Surely you must have missed blue. It is absent in nearly all its phases, excepting, perhaps, in its more vivid tones and in combinations with black. The original of the coat herewith, provides the interesting and invariable exception. Made by Paquin, of a wonderful shade of blue and trimmed with gray fox, the model has been copied abroad to a considerable extent.

The omission of blue will be more than atoned for by spring, when a revival of navy is confidently expected. It will be remembered, too, that Madonna blues were considerably worn last summer, so that fashion is not unmindful of the charm of this generally flattering color.

Every color, like every dog, must have its day: which seems a good time to say that blue is omitted also from night scenes—white, greens, reds and ambers have the floor, and only an occasional woman daring the new pinks or red purple tones about which one reads so much and sees so little.

Red fox and leopard on beige are getting to be among the most approved of color schemes for the winter coat, while badger and natural lynx on black or red continue to attract those who believe in brightening a winter day by wearing colorful clothes.

On several of the newer coats the fur is five inches or more from the coat edge, instead of at the edge, and on some of the ultra models, the cloth has a shallow and wide scallop. In lieu of a hem. Little mellow-shaped fur cuffs are a new note. (Copyright, 1924, Fairchild.)

POPE BENEDICT'S BIRTHDAY. Giacomo della Chiesa, Pope Benedict XV, will celebrate his 70th birthday today, as he was born at Pegli, in the diocese of Genoa, on November 21, 1854. Few pontiffs in the nearly twenty centuries of the church's history have had so many complex and baffling international complications to deal with, particularly immediately after the World War which divided Catholic countries all over the world into warring camps. Though His Holiness, the sovereign pontiff of nearly 300,000,000 people, comes of noble family, his father having been the Marchese della Chiesa. Several members of the pope's family served in the Italian Army in the Great War. Three of his nephews held commissions in the army of King Victor Emanuel, and his only surviving brother is a retired admiral of the Italian Navy, who returned to active service after the war broke out.

DETECTIVE STORIES. The first of the multitude of modern "mystery" or detective stories, was "Zadig," the work of Francois Marie Arouet de Voltaire, the immortal French novelist, dramatist and philosopher, who was born 230 years ago today. In "Zadig," a very observant young man is questioned as to whether he has seen a stray horse or dog. In answer he gave an accurate description of both animals and added that he had not seen them. He declared that he had gained his knowledge of the peculiarities of both animals from a probability of deduction, based on certain indications that he had observed while passing along the highway. On many other occasions the hero of the Oriental tale made similar deductions. It is generally believed that it was a perusal of "Zadig" that inspired Poe to write his clever detective tales and which in turn gave rise to the celebrated fiction character, "Sherlock Holmes." (Pace, Dr. A. Conan Doyle and his host of imitators and rivals.)

Britain Sends Fleet to Egypt

Loses No Time in Making Punishment Sure for Assassins of Her Governor General of Sudan, Whose Death Results in Delicate Situation.

By Telegram to The Freeman
London, Nov. 21.—Great Britain will move part of its Mediterranean fleet to Alexandria at once, to make sure that the Egyptian government loses no time in punishing the assassins of Sir Lee Stack, governor general of the Sudan and commander-in-chief of the Egyptian army.

Sir Lee died in Cairo late last night after blood transfusions had been unsuccessful in combating the effect of three bullet wounds suffered in an attack Wednesday, according to Cairo cablegrams.

The British army leader's death was peaceful, through the administration of narcotics.

The Sudan Herald, shortly before Sir Lee's death, strongly urged the British authorities in Egypt to take drastic action as a sign that the populace of Sudan can rely on the support and protection of Great Britain.

The Herald said it regarded the assassination of Stack as the reply of Egyptian extremists to the activity of the Sudan government in quelling the recent disturbances there.

Sir Lee's death has resulted in a delicate situation in London. The cabinet had an emergency meeting last night and dispatched a severe note to Egypt demanding full punishment of the culprits. Measures of prevention against recurrence of such an attack were drawn by the cabinet.

RURAL CARRIER'S PLAIN.
Writes Of Extra Work Required And Small Pay Received.
Kingston, N. Y., November 19, 1924.
To the Editor of The Freeman:

Sir:

In your editorial of today you urge the cooperation of everyone in helping the Department of Agriculture in making its nation wide farm census. That is a very worthy appeal inasmuch as the country should know precisely how its greatest of industries is progressing. Your article states that the rural mail carriers are to distribute blanks to farm and as I am a rural mail carrier I thought I would let the public know in how many different ways the rural carriers are used by various government departments without pay.

The post office department permits most all of the government branches to make surveys and censuses through the rural mail carriers who have to spend extra time and have extra wear and tear on their conveyances in making all those extra stops. Last spring congress voted the rural carriers a sum of six cents per mile for the upkeep of their equipment but President Coolidge vetoed this and the R. F. D. carriers still get their $1,800 per year for going twenty-four miles over country roads. Then the government allows the princely sum of "thirty dollars per mile per year for every mile over twenty-four" and as this is dirt cheap the rural routes have all been extended to 30 miles or more.

I am merely stating these facts so that the public in general can see the fairness of the rural mail carriers' appeal for an allowance of six cents per mile. Any one familiar with the upkeep and running costs of even the smallest cars can readily see that $1,800 does not leave much after making daily trips of 30 miles each for one year in every kind of weather.

Congress convenes on the first Monday in December, at which time the President's veto of this bill will come before it as unfinished business. It is the hope of the Kingston Rural Carriers as well as rural carriers nationwide, that Congress will see fit to give the forty-five thousand rural carriers of the United States a fair wage in return for their services.

Yours very truly,
HENRY A. PEKIN,
Rural Carrier No. 3,
Kingston P. O.

Lord Didn't See Much to Admire in Wordsworth

Wordsworth is held up for the divine gaze of future generations in the journal of the fourth Lord Holland, published in London.

His lordship was a laudable young man of fashion, who employed part of his leisure in the early days of the nineteenth century in keeping a rather ill journal into which the unworldly, but at length permitted to gaze, was the Living Age.

One paragraph, scribbled on the evening of March 18, 1802, suffices, however, to redeem the journal, for the more important topic of food being safely disposed of, Lord Holland bestows three aristocratic sentences on Wordsworth:

"Dined at the B's. A very dull affair. We had, however, asperges, a rarity at this season. Lady B. informed me that these, as well as the pommies de terre, were sent direct from the estate. Over the wine talked with a young Mr. Wordsworth—a pompous, conceited kind of young man, and a poet. He belongs to the new school of ranting, canting, Germanising vapourists. One has to meet very odd people sometimes."

History of Loving Cups
All racing cups are not necessarily loving cups. A loving cup is one having two or more handles, generally constructed of silver. The custom of the loving cup is traced back to the days of wassailing. It was continued after the introduction of Christianity. The monks called the wassail bowl the "poculum caritatis," meaning "loving cup." The ceremony of drinking from one cup and passing it around was observed in the Jewish paschal supper.

YOUR BOY

See to it that he gets the body-building and strengthening elements that Scott's Emulsion supplies in great abundance. It is the famous white food-tonic that builds strength for all ages.

Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J. 246

Warren Is in Race to Lead Senate

U. S. Senator Frances E. Warren, of Wyoming, father-in-law of Gen. John J. Pershing, and "the greatest shepherd since Abraham," is in the race to become Republican leader of the Senate to succeed the late Henry Cabot Lodge. He is 30 years old, and one of the richest men in America. He has been in the Senate continuously since 1895.

Tongue Twisters That Have Become Classics

Some time ago there appeared in the British comic journal Punch, a particularly effective tongue twister, which ran something to this effect:

A lady was walking down a country lane when she met a tinker. "Ah," she said, "I see you are copper-bottoming your pots." "Oh, no," he replied, "I'm aluminizing 'em, mum." As a tongue twister this is pretty hard to get, though perhaps the American form of the words is just a trifle more difficult to wrap one's tongue around: "I'm aluminizing 'em, mum."

There are, of course, many thousands of these traps for the unwary floating about. Here are a few: The test is, not merely to say them, but to manage to repeat them quickly, say a half a dozen times without getting one's tongue tied up in a knot.

The sea ceaseth and it sufficeth us. A growing gleam growing green. The bleak breeze blighted the bright bloom blossoms.

She took a switch at Smith's fish sauce shop. Fresh of fresh-frying fish. High roller, low roller, lower roller. A box of mixed biscuits, a mixed biscuit box.

She stood at the gate welcoming him in. She sells sea shells on the sea shore. Which switch is the switch, miss, for Ipswich?—Kansas City Star.

Music of the Orient Harsh and Strident

The idea as to what real music really is varies according to race and environment. Music of the Orient is apt to jar upon sensitive occidental ears. Take the question of drums as an instance. The playing of drums in European orchestras has reached a high standard of art, though it is rare that more than three or four are used. In a Burmese orchestra, however, the two principal instruments are one made of a series of drums called the seing-wing and a similar series of gongs called the kyee or gongs played with the fingers and hands and the gongs with knobsticks. Besides these there are cymbals, tom-toms and castanets, the last-named being much larger than the European instruments and made of bamboo. Of wind instruments there are only a number of clarinets and one flute played by the leader or conductor. String instruments are not used, and there are also no brass instruments.

Pleasant for Auntie

Little Margaret was spending a holiday with her aunt in Cornwall. Now, auntie was a spinster, and not in the first bloom of youth. In fact, an unkind person had once been heard to refer to her as "old," and we believe the other word used was "cat." Anyhow, she was not young.

Auntie was determined to give her little niece a good time, and she arranged several pleasure trips in order to give Margaret a chance of appreciating the beauties of the Cornish scenery.

"When I take you to St. Ives I will show you the school that I went to when I was a little girl," promised kind auntie one day when they were out for a walk.

"Oh, auntie, is it still here?" asked the child, innocently. "I expect it's in ruins now. Isn't it?"—London Answers.

Insect-Eating Plant

An insect-eating plant is the sundew, so called because of a shining sticky substance secreted by glands in the sunlight like a rare gem, says the Detroit News. By means of the sticky mess, the sundew attracts and entangles its prey. Then the edges of the leaf curve inward, forming a sort of stomach into which an acid secretion is poured to digest the meal. The portions which cannot be digested are later thrown out and the trap is set for the next victim.

The sundew seems to know when food is near, for if meat is placed close to it the plant slowly reaches out for it. If a portion is placed within a few inches of the plant the leaf will bend toward it until the tiny hairs enfold the delicacy and the sticky substance completes the grip.

Oldest Work of Fiction

"The Tale of Two Brothers," so far as anyone now knows, is the oldest existing piece of fiction. It was written 32 centuries ago by Enana, a scribe of Thebes, who was librarian in the palace of King Maneptha, identified by some as the pharaoh who held the Israelites in bondage.

The tale, which is written on 10 sheets of papyrus, appears to have been invented to entertain the oldest of the princes who subsequently ascended the Egyptian throne. This strange old manuscript now reposes in the British museum, where it is known as the "D'Orbigny papyrus."

Another old book, written more than a thousand years ago, mentions two breeds of poultry which are still being raised in China today.

No Suicide Among Snakes

The biological survey says that rattlesnakes are susceptible to their own poison and may cause death by biting themselves. Snakes are not likely to bite themselves except when severely injured or infuriated and unable to wreak vengeance on their tormentors.

Phrase Coined in Ignorance

It is a curious fact that the phrase, "bald as a badger," owes its origin to authors of the past who had no exact knowledge of natural history, and who, because the forehead of a badger is covered with smooth white hairs, came to the conclusion that it was bald.

Patrick Cardinal Hayes, one of the youngest Cardinals in the Catholic Church, has just passed his fifty-seventh birthday in New York City. "Get me out of jail and I'll be a good boy," written in an appealing note to Hazel "Sunny" Boyne actress, failed to get her to drop her alimony charge against Robert Stuart Eschelman, known on the stage as Don Roberts, and he was held in a New York City jail.

POULTRY

FLOCK SEGREGATION
IS GOOD PRACTICE

Segregating the flock, which means separating the hens according to the approximate time they cease to lay, is advocated as good summer poultry management by the poultry workers at the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca. After the separation has been made, the different groups should be put on range by themselves for the rest of their "vacation."

This practice, the poultrymen at the college say, should result not only in keeping the egg yield at a uniform level, but also should result in a better quality of birds retained for layers or breeders.

In segregating the hens, "they should be transferred to other buildings, and, if possible, separated from the location of the laying flock turned free on a good grass or alfalfa range, and fed plenty of hard grain," says R. C. Ogle of the college staff. "After being thus permitted to rest and recuperate for a period of six to eight weeks, they may be returned to the laying house and should produce a good percentage of large size eggs through the most profitable egg-marketing season of the year."

"This procedure of flock segregation may start in August. Regular selection may be made every 15 days, starting about August 15. By this plan, every opportunity is provided for the birds to recuperate, gain their body weight, and store up a surplus of fat in preparation for the winter laying."

"Selection should of course be continued through September but then the selection may be for the breeding flock. Each group should be handled similarly while on range. Breeders should not be pushed for production until spring."

"Flock segregation pays well and should be in more common practice."

Roup in Poultry During Bad Weather Is Serious

During bad weather, roup puts in its appearance among many flocks and fowls. Drafts, dampness and dith usually are its main causes. Swelled heads, closed eyes, hoarse breathing, sneezing, canker mouth, drooping without apparent cause and wasting away gradually—all are indications of some form of roup.

Roup is a term applied by some poultry keepers to nearly all diseases of the fowl's lungs and throat, but when considered in this broad manner there are different forms as well as different stages of severity, lumps, abscesses and canker or similar sores following after it. In its contagious forms there is a very foul odor it's terrible.

There is no cure for some kinds of roup. In severe cases it is cheaper to kill all the afflicted hens, disinfect the whole place or move the coops to new ground and begin anew.

For light cases of roup use a mixture of one part spirits of turpentine and three parts sweet oil, anointing the head and face of each fowl with a few drops daily, with ten drops down the throat. A tablespoonful of potassium chlorate in each quart of drinking water also is a good remedy. Others prefer to use the well-known pink solution of permanganate of potash in all drinking water; it helps cure afflicted fowls and helps prevent well fowls catching the disease.

Breeding Up Hen Flock
for Higher Production

If the Oregon experiment station had not bred from their high producing birds, they could not have secured the results they did. As a result they have increased the average of the entire flock.

Not all 300-eggers will reproduce themselves. Heredity does not always pass down to the first generation. Sometimes it skips a generation. High productivity can only be secured in the flock where there is vigor and vitality.

Vigor is not always indicated by the appearance of the bird. Factors which indicate vitality include a heavy production of eggs of good fertility and good hatchability, and the hens' chicks must grow well and develop well.

The average in commercial breeders' flocks over the state of Oregon was about 100 eggs. The college started trapping and selecting their birds in five years from that time we had increased the production from an average of 100 eggs to 200 eggs, done entirely by selective breeding, eliminating the poor producers. We had jumped from the 100-egg individual to the 300-egg individual. At the present time the 300 egg individual is quite common—A. G. Lunn, Oregon Agricultural College.

Feed for Molting Hen

Molting hens will need a large supply of protein and phosphorus in order to have the necessary elements for the production of new feathers. Possibly there is nothing so much misunderstood as the extreme necessity of the hens at this time along this line. If they do not have the proper materials the molting period will extend over a time two or three months longer than it should. They may even go until the following spring before resuming laying.

SATURDAY NIGHT,

Big C. E. Mass Meeting Tuesday

Preparations have been completed for the holding of the big Christian Endeavor mass meeting under the auspices of the Ulster County C. E. Union at the Fair Street Reformed Church on Tuesday evening. The meeting will be preceded by a supper served in the church parlors at 6:30 o'clock by the Ladies' Aid Society of the entertaining church. The speaker of the evening will be the Rev. Marvin J. Thompson, pastor of the Oakwood Avenue Presbyterian Church in Troy, N. Y., who is well known here as a forceful and entertaining speaker. All who are interested in C. E. work are invited to attend the supper and mass meeting. Tickets for the supper may be obtained from the members of any of the Christian Endeavor Societies in the union. It is expected that every section of Ulster county will be represented at the supper and meeting by delegates.

Imitation Furs Are in Large Peltry Displays

Imitation fur as well as the genuine species plays a large part in the collection. There are imitation broad tail and moleskin coats and suits, and there is plush material imitating leopard skin that is more striking than it is beautiful. Real leopard skin is dyed a deep orange in a three-quarter cape.

Black costumes are as frequent and as charming as they were last season. One that is assured of great success has a corsage of black fulgurant with gauntlet cuffs and a scarf of Persian lamb. The wrapover skirt of the fur is put on with a deep scallop back and front and has a slight godet fullness.

There are many belted tunics to the day dresses, and a new line is shown in the jakes which extend over the shoulder, giving it a drop effect. Chanel raises the waistline of her evening gowns a little above the average of the rest of her collection.

Demons and Storms

Evil spirits and demons were held by the ancients to be responsible for great winds and storms at sea. Horace, in his writings, lamented the rashness of those who tempted the fates by trying to pass the boundaries that the gods had interposed between the continents. The discovery of the Cape of Good Hope was long delayed by the fear of the storm fiends which infested the African coast, though only at Peel, in the Isle of Man, have I ever heard that the seafaring people were astute enough to capture the author of all the mischief, which is at least comforting. — Montreal Family Herald.

SCHOOL DAYS

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

CLEAR YOUR HEART

CLEAR your heart of hate and go forth in the morning with all your being packed with love.

Try it today if you have not already done so and experience in the evening the exhilarating sensation which comes to him or her who has done his or her full duty to the human kind.

Our greatest happiness, our sweetest dreams, our rosiest realizations, our supreme joys come from proffering a helping hand to the friendless who are trudging up the hill alone, forgotten in the crowds that sweep like the waves on the bosom of the sea.

Thousands of burden-bearers all about us are praying for sympathy, a kindly word, the touch of a gentle hand which you and I can bestow by being humane, thoughtful and considerate.

They are lonely, heart-broken, dependent, but doing their best to stem the relentless tide threatening to sweep them off their feet.

Smile and get a smile in return even though you are carrying a load of sorrow yourself.

Learn who is your neighbor and what your duty is toward him and think not when duty calls.

Purge your heart of pride and envy. March along with the noble-hearted whose lips are singing praises from morn till night, and whose souls are light with eternal light.

Make this a joyous existence instead of one of tears and regrets, laden with care, dimmed with disbelief and enshrouded by a single ray of beneficent faith.

Let these things and rise to an exalted state where there is an enduring peace which cannot be measured or gained.

Let faith thy hand in God's name and do for others the best you can. Be always patient, cheerful and charitable. Ask no man's favor, but seek to have it bestowed upon you as a natural reward for the kindness you have done to others.

And when the play is over there will descend upon you the unspeakable joy which comes to him or her who has made personal sacrifices and done his or her full duty.

Have You This Habit?

By Margaret Morison

GREGORY'S RELATIVES

WHEN Gregory was growing up he had two grandmothers to visit. One lived in a great big house in town. Gregory remembered that house stuffed full of the spoils of yearly trips "to the other side." There were cabinets and shelves and tables cluttered with dust-covered objects of art. Some had been shipped by careless housemaids, some broken and glued hastily so that the edges showed black and sticky. No one knew anything about any of them; some were presents of the white elephant variety, and some priceless antiques.

His other grandmother lived in the country. In his school days when things went wrong, he would imagine himself back in the green-shuttered white cottage, where, in the low-ceilinged parlor, a fire on the hearth threw its light over the orderly room, and touched the Chinese chess men and the Eighteenth century cup and saucer and all the other distinct things he remembered, each with its fascinating story. He knew why a certain plate had been riveted, and he liked the pattern of the carefully darned blinets on his bed upstairs, and he knew that the lemon drops would always be in the blue glass jar.

Then Gregory grew up. It was a question in his own mind, as in every one else's, which of two girls he was going to marry. Even after his wedding he would ask himself why it had been Mary. Not that there was the least doubt in his mind that it was Mary he wanted. But why? Gradually he satisfied himself with the happiness of his life, and left the question blissfully unanswered.

Then he and Mary went to visit his old flame and her husband. He returned home again with a breath of relief. His host and hostess were happy together—no doubt of that. Gregory was glad to know—but they lived in a turmoil, a hurly-burly of undertakings half begun and never finished, that left Gregory speechless. There were magazines a month old uncut on the table, and piles of unanswered letters on the desk; one dropped one's coat and hat anywhere; everyone was late to everything; Gregory was warned against two weak-legged chairs that had never been mended; the children came to the table, and their manners were atrocious. "Bolshevism" was the way Gregory summed it all up to himself on his first evening home.

Then he looked across at Mary reading on the other side of the table. There was a dignity about her that took him back to his grandmother in her little white house. Suddenly he recognized a quality that went a long way toward answering that unsolved question of his early married years—he recognized the habit of personal and material upkeep.

MYSTERY IN PASTOR'S WIFE'S DEATH IN FURNACE

Great mystery surrounds the finding of the charred body of Mrs. C. V. Sheatsley, wife of the pastor of a Columbus, Ohio, Lutheran church, in a burning furnace in the parsonage, the furnace door being closed. Dr. Sheatsley, at first charging murder, finally indicated his belief that his wife, stirred by religious fervor, had purged herself of fancied sins through the ordeal of fire, as practiced by the ancients of Europe. He said knowledge she gained during eight months in India, when he did missionary work there, may have shown her the ability of human beings, through religious fanaticism, to make their bodies practically insensible to pain. A strange episode in the woman's death was the admission of her sixteen-year-old son, Clarence, that he saw his mother's body in the furnace, but said nothing about it until his father found the body. Above are shown Rev. and Mrs. Sheatsley and their children and the death furnace.

Leading Golfers Go Up in the Air—but in Planes

Three of the world's leading golfers, Walter Hagen, Chick Evans and Joe Kirkwood, had never really been up in the air until they reached Wichita, Kans., to compete in the mid-continent open golf tournament. After the tourney the men remained over a day in order to take in the national air races. The following day they were taken to Tulsa in army planes. They are pictured above just before the start. Some Coaches Insist on Taking Big Games

"Why is it," a coach asked the other day, "that certain football coaches insist on taking all the big games they can possibly load onto a schedule when they think they are going to have a strong eleven?"

"Games, of course, are scheduled during and immediately after a football season. The time for these games is at least ten months away. When they are being scheduled the coach may feel fairly sure of having a great team the next year, but do they ever sit down and figure out all that can happen in ten months to a football team? They never consider examinations that may lose players for them, accidents, illness and financial reverses that may keep certain men from returning to school the following autumn. Most men do not realize all that can happen to a football squad and among those men are some of the coaches."

SECTIONAL IDEA IS LAUDED BY A. STAGG

Veteran Coach Says Games Have Proved of Value.

Intersectional football has proved its value this season as a producer of understanding and a developer of good sportsmanship and it should be promoted on an even larger scale. In the opinion of A. A. Stagg, athletic director at the University of Chicago and one of the foremost authorities in amateur athletics in the United States.

"I have always been a booster for the intersectional idea in athletics," he said. "I know you will find that Chicago has been a pioneer in spreading its field of activity. I need only point to the friendly relations Chicago established and maintained with Cornell and the University of Pennsylvania more than 20 years ago and also to our recent exchange of visits with Princeton."

"Last summer with the Olympic team I found a cordial feeling existing between rival athletes from every section of the country that could not have existed had these boys not been shown that the boys from the East were good sportsmen, that the boys from the South, the North and the Middle West were also good sportsmen. The intersectional idea in football has done everything to bring that about. Football is one of the greatest games. Its possibilities for the development of good citizens, morally and physically are unlimited. If we can build up a new race of strong boys with good morals and with the spirit of real sportsmanship I figure that we who are engaged in the profession of directing college athletes are following one of the greatest national ideals."

Calcutta, India, has had a golf club since 1820.

The United States has held the Davis cup since 1920.

Charles W. Burns of San Francisco was elected captain of the Wesleyan soccer team.

Steve Yerkes has resigned as manager of Harrisburg, New York and Pennsylvania league.

Mike Gibbons has turned author and is writing the history of his ring career for a magazine.

The Thompson brothers of Canada, Frank W. J. Nicol, Stanley and Matt, are all golf champions.

Football stars are numbered, but members of the faculty are still allowed to go about incog.

The rule limiting 11 men of a team on the field should bar "Red" Grange, for he is equal to about 7.

John Lavan has been signed to manage the Kansas City American association club again next year.

The first western intercollegiate baseball championship was won by the University of Michigan in 1882.

Fred Lake, former manager of the Boston Nationals, has been named assistant baseball coach at Harvard.

Hector MacDonald, Orange, N. J., has been elected captain of the University of Pennsylvania rowing squad.

Helen Willis, national and Olympic tennis champion, was nineteen years of age on October 6. She is a student at University of California.

A bowling match between Johnny Voorhees of Brooklyn and Jimmy Smith of Milwaukee is a treat in store for New York fans in the near future.

Batters with fat averages do not always shine in the world series. Stanley Harris, for instance, not a great hitter, won three games through his batting efforts.

Baseball fans as well as politicians are now agreed that, whatever differences of opinion may arise in matters of policy, there is no questioning the fact that Calvin Coolidge is a wonderful mascot.

Three Cycling Marks Are Broken in Paris

More records went by the board at the new Montlhéry autodrome in the presence of 20,000 spectators.

M. Brunier, a French bicyclist, paced by heavy motor cycles, went 100 kilometers (62 1/4 miles) in 33 minutes 24 seconds and 112 1/4 kilometers (approximately 70 miles) in one hour.

Vanderstuf, the Belgian rider, paced by the regulation motor cycles, lowered his own world record by traveling 81.9 kilometers (approximately 51 miles) in 1 hour.

Another record went to Marchant, who covered 10 kilometers (6.21 miles) in 4 minutes 13.5 seconds, using a 500 cubic centimeter cylinder machine.

Opinion of St. Andrews on Larger Golf Balls

The opinion of St. Andrews on the American suggestion to make the golf balls larger and lighter will not receive hearty approval from certain golfing leaders in this country. They will be the men who want the golf ball made larger and lighter. The sages of St. Andrews do not want to make the golf ball either larger or lighter.

St. Andrews says the change is so slight that it is not worth making and St. Andrews seems correct in its view. Also, why this constant harping about golf balls? The popularity of golf seems to be the best available answer to this question of size and weight of ball, says the Detroit News. The present style is apparently satisfactory and since it is, why insist upon a change?

The late Mark Hanna was a shrewd and wise politician and one of the smartest things the late Mark Hanna ever said was, "Always let well enough alone." The sages of St. Andrews apparently have the same golden rule that the late Mark Hanna carried.

Englishman Wins Large Sum on $50 Parley Bet

Rebuffed at every turn by Lady Luck in a decade of gambling on the English turf results, picking winners when they didn't run and losers when they did, George Lathian Brown of Pittsburgh, machinist and British by birth, is ready to settle down for a while with a winning of $42,500 on a $50 parley ticket bought on an English horse in London last March.

Brown was informed that the $42,500 was ready for him. He tried to sell the ticket after his horse won his first race in May, but could not find a buyer. The horse won the second race during August and the third straight several days ago.

Furs to Be Rage for Winter Wear

Peltry More Important Than Ever Before, According to Fashion Writer.

It is going to be, in the language of the modistes, a "fur season." Perhaps the tradition that a "white" winter will follow a "green" one, such as last winter, has stimulated interest in fur garments, says a fashion writer in the New York Times. In any event, furs are going to be all the rage, and the woman who wishes to secure the choicest things will wisely give the subject careful attention early.

A fur coat has come to be a more important article in the wardrobe of the well-dressed woman than before because the social order of things has materially changed. It used to be usual to have one fur coat—the piece de resistance—or to have at most one for daytime and another for evening wear. The time-honored sealskin for general occasions and an ermine wrap for evening fully-equipped the old-time woman of fashion as to fur garments. They were for warmth, principally, and were adequate for the days of carriages and a gentler scheme of living.

Motors and long flights, however, at a stiff pace have made demand for a variety of protecting wraps. More and more fur is used for utility, beauty and luxury. The lady of affluence these days desires to change her fur wrap almost as she changes her gown. It is quite a common experience for a saleswoman in one of the smart shops to sell four or five costly fur coats to a customer at one time. This season's furs are more attractive, more unusual than have ever been shown, with many novelties in both the expensive and the inexpensive kinds.

Cloth Materials Are Used. Sealskin in all its varieties is still to be worn, but it is no longer smart as an entire garment. Some of the dressy coats and wraps sent from the Paris ateliers are made of satin, crepe and cloth with sealskin introduced as a part of the skirt, in sleeves, deep collar, or in any one of several attractive ways, making a wrap of exceptional dignity and elegance. Mink is another staple among the handsomer furs. It is especially good this season, and some of the new mink coats, wraps and capes are superb—quite as popular with young women as with the dowager.

Perhaps the smartest among the dark furs is caracul. In the natural color and light dyes this had a tremendous vogue last season, particularly in the chic little jacketette which will be worn again this year. It is shown in many lovely novelty styles for younger women, in the misses and junior models. Baby lamb, broadtail and caracul, especially the fine, silky, "baby" quality are all fashionable, with the preference for caracul.

For a slender figure nothing gives an appearance of such smartness as a coat of black caracul, cut in one of the new straight loose-fitting models—a wrap that becomes a woman of the well-groomed tailored type. Beaver is another old-timer that is being made a feature of this year's styles. It was always considered a clumsy fur, rather effect. The coat flare begins at a higher line than the dress and is slightly more pronounced. Godets and flounces are employed to achieve this distended effect, which usually occurs about the knees. The trend in winter coats is toward the new and fuller silhouette, but both outlines are and will remain in vogue for fall and winter. A frequent characteristic of the flaring type is a slightly fitted effect at the waistline. Many coats are double breasted, so that the upper part may fold back, while the under front, of a different fabric, is held across the figure—the famous double coat effect which has attracted such wide attention this season.

Wide gauntlet cuffs of fur are the most effective of an unusually varied collection of sleeves which appear on the new fall and winter coats. There are no decided dicta on coat sleeves, which may be narrow, puffed, bishop or wide wing affairs that give a tea-gown appearance.

Collars are often of the same material as the cuff and correspond in genre. For instance, the gauntlet cuffs mentioned above are accompanied by a high collar of the same fur. Large, abundant director collars and simple, smaller affairs share the stage equally. Fichu, choker and shawl effects lead.

The materials of ensemble coats invariably include the material of the dress. Sometimes this is the principal fabric and sometimes it is utilized only as a prominent trimming. The ribbed silks, particularly ottoman and bengaline, soft napped cloths including kasha and velours de laine, velvet, velveteen and Smyrne cloths are the leading fabrics for the street coat. Scotch and tartan plaid woollens are highly favored for sports coats.

Shades for Coats. Black, green and brown shades are in the van for coats, and the greatest of these is brown. A full range of brown hues is seen in the new models, emphasizing russet-brown, brick, scarlet, dull red and bottle green, the latter one of the season's outstanding shades, is recommended for those to whom the brown range does not appeal.

Burunduk, or chipmunk, leopard, natural muskrat, astrakhan, beaver, squirrel and the varied species of fox are the outstanding fur trimmings for fall and winter coats. These are employed principally for collars, cuffs and hemline borders. Large buttons, tassels, braids and self trimmings applied in such a manner as to give a contrasted effect are among other outstanding trimmings of the season.

Straight lines feature the vast majority of ensemble coats, and there is less of the flared effect than in any other part of the feminine wardrobe. When the low flare does occur it is usually accompanied by a slightly fitted waistline.

Sleeves and waistline follow the general tendencies of other coats. The sleeves are fairly ample and frequently fur trimmed, while the high standing collar is an invariable note.

The woolen suede-finish materials, velvet, kasha, velours de laine, duvetyne and fur are the outstanding materials.

The lining of the coat is nearly always the identical material of the principal fabric of the dress.

Brown, dark red and green are the leading shades. A characteristic ensemble touch is the combination of a dark colored coat and a contrasting, bright-hued dress.

The straight silhouette is rarely varied, and when it is the hemline flare is very slight. The waistline is usually not marked.

Materials are more sumptuous than in regular daytime dresses. In addition to the ribbed silks—ottoman, bengaline and fallie—there are crepe silks, satins, plaided georgette, broad cloth, chamois, printed and brocade velvets, silver lame shot with color and mouseline de soie. Sometimes an entire tunic is developed in a pliable fur pel.

The bright tones of red, green, beige and gray are the most significant shades of a very diversified color range. Vividness is the basic color note of the ensemble dress or tunic, blouse.

Traveling Through Chile

Wealthy Rancher of Chile.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

Chile, which has come into the world news by the unusual procedure of panishing its President for six months, is as interesting geographically as politically. The best way to see this shoe-string of a country is to travel on the longitudinal railway, from its beginning in the dreary desert to its dropping-off place on the wooded shore of the Gulf of Ancud. Few save the Chileans themselves, make this comprehensive journey, from the rainless region of the north to the rich agricultural heart of the country, and on through the magnificent forest and river lands, long held by the valiant Araucanian Indians, to that enchanting mountain and lake region unrivaled in beauty the world over.

The "longitudinal" beginning is at Pisagua, a port north of Antofagasta. Arica, still farther north in disputed territory, is not yet connected with the Chilean railroad system, being beyond the nitrate zone.

It takes a drab pencil to draw a picture of the country crossed the first two days out from Antofagasta. One looks in vain on the monotonous, treeless plain for so much as a cactus plant, and the line is too far inland for one to glimpse the restless, blue Pacific, whose tempestuous surf enravens even the most colorless of the desert ports. To the east bleak gray hills shut off the snow-crowned Andes.

Near the railroad the traveler sees deeply furrowed patches of white earth resembling old salt deposits. These mark the sites of former nitrate workings. Nitrate of soda, Chile's chief source of revenue, of which the country has virtually a world monopoly, is obtained from the rough rock known locally as caliche. It is dug or blasted from the earth, in some places lying near the surface, in others 20 to 30 feet below ground. The nitrate deposits lie from 15 to 90 miles inland from the coast, at an altitude varying from a little over 3,000 to 13,000 feet.

As one continues south from Copiapo, little by little the desert flora grows from tufts of grass and stunted bush to tall algarobas and cacti of many varieties, one with a great red bloom. At Valparaiso the railroad enters a wide, irrigated valley, emerald green with alfalfa, and vines heavy with luscious white grapes whose equal it is difficult to find in any other part of the world.

Coquimbo a Mining Center.

At the river Elqui the longitudinal railway gives a twist seaward to serve the charmingly situated town of La Serena and Coquimbo, its port. For a century and a half Coquimbo has been famed as a mining center. One of our North American steel companies has developed a remarkable iron property in the gigantic Tofo mines, where ore taken from a mountain of iron by steam shovels is conveyed by an electrically operated railroad to the pier and loaded directly, through chutes, into specially constructed steamers.

It takes six days of daylight travel from Antofagasta to Calera. Here we meet the lateral railway in the Aconcagua valley, connecting the town of Los Andes, at the foot of the mountains, with Valparaiso.

The Aconcagua valley is Chile's gem, a lovely vale where a merry little river, dashing down from crystalline heights, is bordered by velvety green hills. This is the rich agricultural region which stretches far south to the Bio-Bio river. This and adjoining valleys, the geologists tell us, are the remains of ancient floods like those we see in far southern Chile.

Where the coast range of the Andes dips its feet in the sea, Valparaiso, South America's chief port on the Pacific, rises like an amphitheater from the crescent shore.

This city somehow does not seem typically South American or even distinctly Chilean. There are so many Britishers and Chileans of British blood here that the place has much in common with British colonial ports.

Like Hongkong, Valparaiso is formed of a few level streets on land in part reclaimed from the sea, and a residential section on the hills above. Elevators on inclined planes, known locally as "ascensors," connect the streets by the shore with those on the heights.

The situation of Santiago, Chile's capital, nearly 1,800 feet above the sea, is most attractive. It ranks in beauty among South American cities second only after Rio de Janeiro and equals La Paz, Arequipa, and Caracas.

Santiago's Hanging Garden. Its most notable physical feature is Santa Lucia, a singular hill of volcanic origin in the heart of the city. This once barren knoll, 400 feet above the plain, has been transformed into a hanging garden. Over its tree top one looks down on the great city of half a million souls—a city of low buildings and checker-board streets set in emerald meadows and encompassed by snowy mountains.

South of Santiago, "the longitudinal" passes through the long agricultural valley between the Coast range and the Andes. Wheat fields and vineyards border the track. State rows of Lombardy poplars and eucalyptus inclose the fields.

At the stations are female fruit sellers uniformed in white. They have melons for sale—big yellow ones—which, like grapes, take fir rank. On all sides are indications that industrial growth, though slow, is certain. Besides possessing material for manufacturing, Chile has unlimited water power in the Andes for hydroelectric development.

Excellent farms, alfalfa fields, browsing cattle mark the southern part of Chile's main valley.

Few foreigners stop between Santiago and Concepcion, a day or a journey on the express. Concepcion, Chile's third city in importance, is the north shore of the Bio-Bio river not far from the sea.

Nine miles from Concepcion lies seaport, Talcahuano, with the harbor in southern Chile. It is a seat of the whaling industry, whaling being found nearer the shore than in most parts of the world.

Southward lie the ports of Corral and Lota, where vast coal mines extend under the sea. Chile is the principal coal-producing country of South America, with an estimated coal reserve of two billion tons.

When one crosses the Bio-Bio river he enters that romantic territory known to the Chileans as the Pto. Within the memory of the living, white men might not enter the region of great forests and noble rivers. It was the domain of the Araucanians.

Southern Chile Very Moist.

If the north of Chile has "gone dry" the south is certainly wet. Here it is pitter pluvius reigns. Vapor-laden winds from the Pacific meet with chilled air. The winds, ascending the Andes, pass through Nature's wringer and are hurled back in torrents. Annual precipitation must be gauged in feet instead of inches. Seven feet, even eighteen feet, farther south, is the official record.

There are now about 30,000 people of German stock in southern Chile, mostly between Valdivia and Puerto Montt.

The towns of La Union and Osorno show marked German influence, while Puerto Varas, on the shore of lovely Lake Llanquihue, is a typical Teutonic village.

From Puerto Varas, "the longitudinal" continues on to Puerto Montt, of the Gulf of Ancud, where it ends. The only Chilean railroads south of this point are the line which connects the towns of Ancud and Castro, on the island of Chilo, and a privately owned stretch of rail near Punta Arenas.

The latter city is reached after the traveler, forsaking railroad for coasting steamer, sails past many miles of unexplored wilderness. Situated on the mainland facing the Strait of Magellan, Punta Arenas is the most southerly town of any consequence in the world. Tributary to it in Tierra del Fuego is an exceedingly important sheep country to which the city with its 24,000 inhabitants owes its recent prosperity. For its size Punta Arenas is the most commercially successful of all Chilean cities. Its exports to the United States in a single year recently total $12,000,000.

Mrs. Warren G.
Harding Dead

A week-end trip on the Presidential yacht Mayflower that she was stricken with a recurrence of the kidney trouble that once before proved nearly fatal. This was in September, 1922.

For days Mrs. Harding lay in the White House at the point of death. Many times hope was given up. A sorrowing nation waited nonchalantly for news of the end. But Dr. Charles E. Sawyer, her life-long physician, and Dr. Joel T. Doane, of the Mayflower, performed a miracle. They kept the lovely White House mistress alive until Dr. Charles Mayo, the world-famous specialist, could reach Washington from Minnesota. Dr. Mayo saved her life. Recovery was slow and painful, but the next spring found Mrs. Harding in Florida, with the President, convalescing.

The Fatal Alaska Trip.

Then came the Alaska trip, with its disastrous ending. Should Mrs. Harding go? Would her health permit? Mrs. Harding decided the matter for herself and went.

Mrs. Harding was at the bedside of her husband in the San Francisco Hotel when the end came. The shock was appalling.

With the passing of the winter, Mrs. Harding returned to the capital from Marion. Soon after, the great war President, Woodrow Wilson, died. Just as Wilson had come out of retirement to ride behind the caisson bearing her husband's body, so Mrs. Harding unobtrusively journeyed to the big cathedral on the heights of Mount St. Alban and attended the last rites for Wilson.

Again Mrs. Harding returned to Marion, taking residence with Dr. and Mrs. Sawyer. The sudden death of her old physician came as another and distinct shock. It was soon after that she suffered the third serious recurrence of the kidney ailment, and Dr. Carl Sawyer, son of the former White House physician, called in specialists. A slight rally came just before Election Day, November 4, 1924, and she was able to receive the returns that showed the election of her husband's old runningmate, President Coolidge.

Some Punkins!

Western Exchange—The letter "P" is the most important in the alphabet, because it leads all others in perfection. It is likewise first in peace and prosperity and gives pleasure to its proper form. It is found in every enterprise and aspiration and without its valuable office the anchor of hope would be but a commonplace hoe. Besides being foremost in philosophy, it is at the front in patriotism, patience and piety. Purpose has no meaning without it and the pyramids are built upon its base.—Boston Transcript.

Expect to Harness Tides

The force of the ebb and flow of the Atlantic's tide may soon be harnessed to produce electricity, Dexter P. Cooper, brother of Hugh L. Cooper, the hydraulic engineer who designed the hydroelectric plants at Muscle Shoals, Keokuk, and Niagara Falls, Canada, is at present making preliminary surveys along the Maine seacoast with a view to finding generating station sites near Eastport. The average difference between high and low tide at Eastport is 18 feet 2 inches.

MILLINERY FASHIONS HERALD
NEW SHAPES AND NEW STYLES

NOT that we love the little, youthful, close-fitting hats less—but that we love a change more—therefore our new millinery for fall presents radical new departures in styles. It has taken on dignified and pretentious crowns and these necessitate brims. And upon brims rests the responsibility for the success of the new shapes; for women demand, above all things, becomingness in their hats. Brims undertake to make themselves subtly nattering and are endlessly varied, so that there is a hat for every face.

Four representative models, in the group shown here, reveal the dash and spirit of the new shapes. A high velvet hat appears at the top, with narrow, rolling brim, which is very soft about the face. A large wheel of moire ribbon and a fancy ornament trim it. Another velvet hat appears at the left, with brim turning sharply up at one side. A long velvet ear, fastened with a jeweled ornament adorns it. These velvet hats are made in black and various colors.

Many of the smaller shapes and some of the larger ones are covered with corded silk and this would prove a fine medium for a shape like that at the right. The very tall, upstanding trimming at the front is of velvet fastened with one of the new ivory ornaments. Heavy ribbon is often used for these tall trimmings.

There are many models in hatters' plush and other plushes among the new fall models, and nothing is more satisfactory for style or wearing quality. Satin is well represented, but just at present felt hats are more in demand than any others. The hat at the bottom of the group, trimmed with heavy, wide ribbon and small, silk ornaments, has a becoming and unique brim and might be developed in any of the popular millinery materials.

312 Wall StreetFEDERATED COUNCIL
PARENT-TEACHER MEETING.

The November meeting of the Federated Council Parent-Teacher Association was held Wednesday at the high school, all the schools being represented except No. 3. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Dederick, the vice president, Mrs. Arthur Russell, presided. The secretary, Miss Cordes, read a communication concerning "Golden Rule Day," asking the members to observe December 7, by eating a very simple meal and contributing as much as possible towards the fund for the starving children of the Near East. The council voted to send $25 to this worthy cause. A communication was also read explaining and giving the program for Education Week, and then attention of the council was directed to the following stanzas of our National Hymn, America, which seem to be little known:

"Our Glorious Land today,
'Neath education's sway,
Soars upward still,
Its halls of learning fair,
Whose bounties all may share,
Behold them everywhere,
On vale and bill.

Thy safeguard, Liberty,
The schools shall ever be
Our nation's pride!
No tyrant hand shall smite,
While with encircling might,
All here are taught the right
With Truth allied."

It was announced that the sixth World Wide Quinquennial Convention of International Women would be held in Washington, D. C., from May 4 to 14, 1925. The council had been asked for a contribution towards the expenses of this convention but the matter was laid on the table for discussion at another meeting.

No. 1 P. T. A. reported having held a masquerade party on Halloween, the proceeds of which were used to equip the school with a system of electric bells.

No. 2 reported an increase in attendance at their meetings, at one meeting this fall 50 being present, and at another 55. The keynote of their work for the year is to be along the line of character building and they are to have printed programs.

No. 4 reported on food sale in prospect for this week, the proceeds to be used for their work.

No. 6 reported a fair held at their school building last month, netting them $150 and that their association had helped the senior class with a play, furnishing ice cream for them.

No. 7 reported having bought a victrola for the school, also having sold candy, the proceeds of which could be devoted to a fund for rubber bands, shoes and other clothing for needy children.

The advisability of purchasing and presenting to the high school a moving picture machine, using non-inflammable films, was discussed by the council and a committee appointed to secure further information on the subject.

Our Growing Population.

The following births have been reported to the board of health:

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Van Steenburgh Swart, 732 Broadway, a son, Harry Leo.

Mr. and Mrs. John P. Naccarato, 215 Delaware avenue, a son, John Michael.

Mr. and Mrs. Ward A. Nichols, 55 Gage street, a son, Clifford Carl.

WHY IT PAYS TO PRODUCE FOWLS OF QUALITY

It's the extra pound of flesh on the fowl that cheapens production costs and commands a premium price for the poultryman. According to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation the extra pound can be put on for from 5 to 7 cents, which increases the value of each pound to the consumer by making the entire carcass more plump and attractive, so it commands a fancy price over lighter birds. Heavy hens sell from 5 to 11 cents more than light hens. It's true all down the line—turkeys, ducks, capons, hens and young fry—the extra pound brings the extra dollar.

Over a period of three years the New York market shows heavy fresh-killed milk-fed fowls or hens weighing 8 pounds or over to average from 4 to 11 cents higher per pound than the light fowls weighing 5 pounds. The five-year average for the month of September shows the heavy fowls to average 9 cents over the light weight, the margin broadening during October and November, reaching its height in December, when the heavy fowls range to 11 cents a pound over the light weights.

The average weight of the ordinary fowl as it comes from the farm is 3 1/2 to 4 pounds. The poultryman with the eye for business will add an extra pound or so and receive the top prices. The farmer who takes thin, underfed poultry to market is beating himself.

Use FREEMAN advertising regularly and conservatively and results will surely follow.

Postponement in Kuehn Inquest

The adjourned hearing in the inquest before Coroner W. N. Conner to inquire into the death of Police Officer Augustus Kuehn, who shot himself accidentally at Leggs Mills on October 21, was postponed Thursday afternoon. District Attorney Frederick G. Traver, who is conducting the investigation, is confined to his home on Fair street with a severe cold. Assistant District Attorney Murray is engaged in trial work in county court. The inquest was adjourned without date. Coroner Conner will set a date for the adjourned hearing at such a time as it will be possible for Mr. Traver to be present. Two hearings have already been held at which a great deal of testimony was taken. The third adjournment was taken in order to allow the district attorney to locate additional witnesses who it is believed will be able to tell some of the circumstances surrounding the shooting. Thus far all testimony has pointed toward accidental shooting when a gun handled by Officer Kuehn was discharged while he was examining it.

OIL STOVE CAUSED SMALL FIRE BUT BIG EXCITEMENT.

An alarm of fire rung in from Box 94, corner of North Front and Fair streets, Thursday evening about 6:30 o'clock, brought out not only the apparatus from Wiltwyck and Excelsior fire stations, but also from the Central station. Automobiles came out in large numbers, blocking the streets and hindering the firemen on their way to the fire. The fire was on the second floor of the stone building known as the De Wall tavern at 78 North Front street, near Crown street. Investigation by Chief Murphy showed that the fire, which was in the apartment of Howard Wood, was caused by a flash from the kitchen which in an oil stove setting, the oil in the reservoir on fire. The flames burned the floor and the damage amounted to a few dollars. The firemen by use of chemicals soon had the flames extinguished.

William H. Anderson Acquiring All of Them in Sing Sing Prison—Will Be Released Christmas Eve.

By Telegraph to The Freeman. Ossining, N. Y., Nov. 21.—While no official word has come to William H. Anderson in his Sing Sing prison cell of the Christmas present granted him by the board of parole, the superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League today appeared in buoyant spirits.

In his application to the board for release the former anti-saloon leader asserted he had not committed a crime and that his act was of a highly technical nature. When asked by the board if his conviction had aroused any resentment against the courts he answered:

"I believe that under the constitutional form of government, the courts should be supreme."

Anderson said he would go to his Yonkers home when released.

General Sessions Judge Collins said today in sentencing Harry Behan, known as the "Broadway rat," to 20 years in Sing Sing prison. England Likes Salmon

ARRANGING GARAGE TO KEEP THE CAR CLEAN

Part of Garage That Will Help Keep Car Clean.

As a usual thing, as soon as the automobile owner receives a new car, fresh and shining from the factory, he at once makes a resolution to see that the glossy coat of varnish on its sparkling sides receives the proper care so that he will save the expense of frequent painting jobs. Too often his good resolutions come to grief after a few attempts at washing the car in the home garage. Home garages are not always an ideal place for car washing. In the first place, it is a hopeless task unless the garage has been equipped with concrete floor, and even then unless it is considerably larger than is usual, there is so little clearance between the garage walls and the car that the whole car can only be covered with considerable difficulty. Moreover, the problem of getting adequate light is troublesome. The obvious solution of all the difficulties is an apron or washing platform built out in front of the garage where there is plenty of room as well as plenty of light. Such platforms are not expensive and provide many other advantages besides making an ideal place for washing and doing minor repairs. The children will soon make the clean concrete paved area the center of their playground activities and it will be found as much used for hobby horse races and marble tournaments as for changing spare tires or washing off the car. All danger of a back-yard mudhole is eliminated and the ticklish job of backing in and out of the garage is made easy.

Building a Platform.

It is, of course, easier to build such a platform at the time the garage floor is laid. But the job can be done satisfactorily at any time without much more expense. Such platforms are usually made not less than ten feet wide and eighteen feet long, which provides ample room to work freely any place around the average sized car without moving it. The pavement should be given a slope of about a quarter of an inch per foot so that it will drain readily. The slope may be all in one direction with a gutter at the lower side to carry the water away, or, if desired, it may be made to slope in from all sides to a drain in the center which is connected to the sewer and is provided with a clean-out trap, to catch the mud and dirt which is washed off of the car.

The concrete should be placed in a single course and the ground which it covers should first be smoothed off evenly and dirt tamped firmly in any low places. A course of gravel or cinders should be placed over the dirt and tamped firmly into place and the concrete placed directly on it. The six-inch thickness will be found ample strength so that it will not be injured by heavy coal wagons or trucks.

It is possible to mix the concrete rapidly enough to place the entire job at one time. The pavement may be laid all in one piece without joints. In case, however, a mixer is not available or the builder does not have the equipment to finish a piece of concrete of this size, it may just as well be placed in sections that are of a convenient size to be filled and finished by hand.

A five or six-foot square is about the most convenient size for hand mixing and finishing and the job may thus be done at odd times by the owner himself. The squares should be marked off and a two-inch plank firmly staked on edge on all sides of the square so that the top is just level with the finished pavement. The squares are filled in checkerboard fashion, that is in alternate sections, so that it is possible to work around on all sides of the square in finishing it. It is then unnecessary to use forms for all sides of the last squares to be placed, as the blocks help to serve as forms.

The concrete should be mixed in the proportions of one part portland cement to two parts of clean sand and three parts of crushed stone or clean, screened pebbles. The ingredients should be mixed thoroughly and only enough water used to make a quaky or jelly-like mass. Too much water tends to weaken the concrete. If mixing is done by hand care should be used to see that it is thorough, so that all particles receive an even coating of cement.

Surface Should Be Smooth. As soon as the concrete is in place it should be struck off even with the tops of the forms or side pieces by working a straight-edged board back and forth with a zigzag motion as it is worked across the surface. The surface should then be smoothed down with a wooden float, a long wooden trowel, which is worked over the surface with a circular rubbing motion. It is not best to use a metal trowel too much as the finish produced by the wooden float is more satisfactory for such surfaces. Only enough troweling should be done to produce a smooth surface.

As soon as the concrete has hardened it should be covered with loose dirt or sand so that it can be kept moist for a period of a week or ten days. The curing is important, as it makes sure that the surface is hard and durable and if the concrete is properly mixed, placed and kept moist in this manner, it will wear like the surface of a concrete road pavement.

A low curbing may be placed around the edges if it is thought necessary. Such a curbing will add to the appearance of the job and keep the soil from washing out onto the concrete.

Ways for Using Hammer in Making Car Repairs

Care in the use of the machinist's hammer, which forms a part of the tool equipment of every automobile, is one of the first things the amateur automobile repairman must learn when working around the engine, says a writer in the American Motorist.

With this hammer he can do more damage in a moment than a good man can repair in a week. His first inclination is to use this form of persuasion on any and every refractory part, and this is a desire which should be overcome.

Not only should the hammer itself not be used on any metal parts without the intervention of a block of wood to protect the surface, but care must be exercised to avoid hitting the other parts through the inaccuracy of aim that distinguishes the unskilled wielder of this tool.

A poorly aimed blow that misses its target and lands on one of the valve push rods or similarly vulnerable parts with any degree of force is apt to cause trouble of an expensive nature.

It is a good thing for the novice to be sparing in the use of his hammer as a cure-all. Do not resort to it unnecessarily, and do not use a sledgehammer blow where a light tap will do the work.

ENGLISH ARE BETTER IN BALLOON TIRES

Mr. L. Nuttall of Goodmayes, England, assembling his invention of a better balloon tire. The inner tube, an inch thick, takes a tremendous pressure, and is the full size of the wheel down to the drum or hub flange. Steel discs fit over the sides to the rim bolts. Note the spares hanging on the rack.

Financial and Commercial

By Telegraph to The Freeman. New York, Nov. 21.—The forward movement in prices of railroad and industrial stocks was interrupted today by the heavy offerings of stocks on profit taking and short selling operations. Declines of a point or more took place in many stocks which have been leaders in the advanced since November 5. While these recessions were in progress new stocks were brought forward and, in an exceedingly heavy turnover, rushed up to new high prices.

The simultaneous upward movement of the stock and bonds of the New Haven and St. Paul systems was the feature of the speculative security markets.

Rock Island rose three points to a new high of 46 1/2 on heavy trading. Missouri Pacific, Wabash, Katy and a few other rails showed the effects of profit taking, their early declines showing losses of 2 points on the average from yesterday's high; but good recoveries followed these reactions. Interest was well maintained in Kansas City Southern and other low priced rails which featured yesterday's session.

United States Steel encountered heavy selling after reaching a new high for the year at 117 and was forced down to 116. Allis Chalmers, with a gain of 3 1/2 points at 65 1/2, was one of the most active of the popular investment industrials.

Reactionary movements characterized a number of the active industrial stocks in the late trading. Mack Trucks sold down to 109 1/2 against the week's high at 114. American Woolen declined 2 1/2 points to 58 1/2. American Can could make little headway; Cast Iron Pipe and Radio Corporation lost about 3 points. Oils failed to attract any larger following and sales were generally at concessions in prices.

Motorists held their early gains and investment rails were steady all the way through.

Shower for Miss Carter.

Miss Mary Carter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. DeWitt Carter of Pine Grove avenue was the guest of honor at a very pretty shower given for her by Miss Carrie Malnes at her home on Greenlawn avenue this week. Miss Carter will become the bride of Clarence Malnes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Malnes of Greenlawn avenue, on Thanksgiving Day. Miss Carter was the recipient of many handsome and useful gifts. Music was enjoyed during the evening and delicious refreshments were served.

McGrath-Lafferty.

A pretty but quiet wedding was solemnized on Thursday at the Lady of Lourdes Church at Allaven when Miss Agnes Frances Lafferty of Allaven and James J. McGrath of Kingston were united in marriage by the Rev. Thomas A. Dinan, M. S. The bride was attended by her sister as maid of honor and Captain Martin Munnely of Port Ewen was the best man. The bride was attired in a brown satin dress with hat to match and wore a corsage bouquet of white sweet peas and tea roses. The bride party, following the ceremony, motored to Saugerties where they had dinner, and then returned to Kingston for a wedding trip to Niagara Falls and Canada.

Local Products To Whole World

Kingston products are being sent over the world by L. Barth & Co., Inc., from their factory here. Recent shipments have been made to Georgia, Florida and Alabama. Goods were sent to the Ben Franklin Hotel in Philadelphia this week, a consignment of ranges has gone to the West Indies and this morning an order for refrigerators was received from Melbourne, Australia, which is about as far away from Kingston as one can go.

Soap Conceded to Be First Makers of Soap

Made from goat's tallow and beechwood ashes, the earliest forms of soap were used by the ancient inhabitants of Germany to give a reddish color to the hair, according to the records of the historian, Pliny the elder. Although mixed into hard and liquid material, it was not known as a cleansing substance, but was often employed in the treatment of skin sores.

Today the yearly production in the United States is estimated to be 100,000,000 and one-half billion pounds. Not until about the second century of the Christian era was the product used as a cleansing article. It is claimed, and ancient records for manufacturing material unearthed in the ruins of Babylon still contained a quantity of it in a good state of preservation.

Northern Spain and Marseilles later came the chief centers of the industry and produced large amounts of Castile variety from olive oil and earlier accounts of the existence of soap among Asiatic peoples are believed to refer to some kinds of dyes which were devoted to purposes entirely apart from those of cleansing substances.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Some Preliminaries to His Good Night's Rest

Cortlandt Bleeker, at a dinner on 34th avenue, was talking about the prices in Europe since the war. As they are high sometimes, but not of it is travelers' tales. That reminds me that I heard a good one lately. It was a tale about Ceylon. An American had just arrived at a hotel and the chambermaid led him to his room. He asked her to put his bed in the office. "Have you asked at the office your frog, sir?" "My frog?" gasped the American, "what do you mean?" "The frog to kill your cockroaches. Make them give you a young, muscular frog, a good jumper; that will clean out the cockroaches thoroughly. Then, afterward, the cockroaches are all gone, you go down to the office again and your snake." "Snake?" "Holy cow! Why a snake?" A snake to eat the frog, sir," replied the maid. "Then, as soon as the frog is eaten, you must get out of bed and the snake with a club; after that you'll be sure of a good night's rest."

Example of the Bee

It is very important to remember, John Burroughs, the great naturalist, that the bee does not get honey from the flowers; it makes honey from it. It gets from the flowers. What gets from the flowers is nothing but water. The bee gets its water, retires, thinks it over and its private process makes its honey. Many nature writers fail to profit from the example of the bee. They go to the woods and collect, and then write about their experience—but they don't give us honey. They don't retire and think about what they find in the woods to a private process. They give us just a little sweet water, pretty roughly diluted. I have tried for years not to give the world just a record, but to flavor it with my personality.

Duck's Use of Wings

Do ducks use their wings while swimming under water? The question discussed frequently among sportsmen and nature students, and opinions sometimes differ. Testimony of reliable authorities, says Popular Mechanics Magazine, supports the belief that various species of ducks and geese, loons, and other diving birds do use their wings when swimming beneath the surface for food or in order to escape capture. A ruddy duck was observed on Lake Michigan long ago, feeding in fifteen or twenty feet of clear water. As it got well under on its downward plunge, the two about two-thirds extended, were in quick, short strokes, at the end of about one second, to assist propelling it and in rising to the surface as well.

Bowls Were Not Alike

A man selling pottery came to a shop and rapped at a certain lady's door. "He," says the Boston Globe. "He asked in. Just as he got inside the door he dropped one of the bowls, supposedly by mistake, and it did not break. When in the kitchen he dropped another, and then remarked to the lady that his bowls were guaranteed not to break. She bought some, to be used for when delivered. When they came she put them away to wait until one of her friends would appear and she would drop one for a surprise. A lady finally arrived. The lady took one from the shelf and dropped it intentionally on purpose. It shattered in a thousand pieces—quite unlike a rubber sample."

Egypt's Sirdar Bombed and Then Shot

Two bombs, one of which were exploded, were thrown at Major General Sir Lee Stack, Sirdar of the Egyptian army, while he was driving from the Ministry of War in Cairo. He was then attacked with revolver shots and seriously wounded in the stomach. His aide-camp, his chauffeur and a policeman also were wounded.

Roman Soldier Figures in Crucifixion Legend

In the legendary lore of the church, the soldier who pierced the side of Christ on the cross with the spear has been called Longinus. This man, unfounded tradition said, was one of the soldiers appointed to guard the cross, and was led to become a follower of Christ through the miracles which attended the crucifixion. He was also set with the band who watched the sepulcher and was the only one who refused to be bribed by money to say that the body of Christ had been stolen by the disciples.

For his fidelity to the truth, Pilate resolved on his destruction; but for a time Longinus managed to escape. He left the army to devote himself to the work of the gospel, but he did this without getting legal discharge from military life.

He and two of his fellow soldiers retired to Cappadocia, where they began to preach the gospel, but at the instigation of the Jews, Pilate sent after them as deserters, beheaded them and had their heads brought back to Jerusalem.

So runs the story which may have a mistake for its base, longinus being the technical name for a long spear.

Where Insects Are Food

In Mexico live tribes of Indians who eat a kind of bread made in great part of the eggs of notonectes, which are large water bugs. The honey ants, swelled with sweet matter, are used for a dessert in Central America. The natives of Africa make bread with the termites, while those of Brazil prepare them with a sauce.

Several Chinese peoples find caterpillars and the chrysalises of the silkworm excellent food. They are fried in butter oil, with the addition of yolk of egg and other ingredients. The Hovas of Madagascar regale themselves with the chrysalises of the bombyx, which are often fried or boiled. Natives of Australia eat moths, which they pursue and catch with the aid of torches. They are first dried and then their wings are removed.

What Did Peggy Say?

In her "Memories" Katherine Tynan writes at some length of Dudley Hardy, the great Bohemian. "I can remember an evening when Dudley slipped the tablecloth off the table and was Maud Allen. In the midst of the delicious performance in came the world English cook. Later when, in the Irish way, I went to the kitchen fire to warm my feet, I said to her: 'Isn't Mr Hardy funny, cook?' 'Well, I did think so at first, mum,' she said, 'but now I've got used to him and I don't take no notice.' Once we came in to find Dudley in a desperate mood. There had been a terrible cheap French lamp in the dining room, all ornament, that gave a glaring unshaded light. We found it beautifully swathed in white silk and lace, looking all a lamp ought to look. But Dudley sat, his head in his hands, a guilty creature with a conviction of guilt. He had cut up some of Peggy's (his wife's) beautiful Paris lingerie to make the lamp-shade."

Relic of Roman Era

Among the interesting curios to be found in the museum at Oxford, England, is a huge stone sack. It is carved as though fresh from a man's back; it bears the mark of a rope which once encircled it in two places, and has the usual puckers at the mouth, where the string once secured the opening. All over the stone can be seen the marks of the coarse sackcloth which once covered it. Its history is curious. Some years ago it was fished up in the Thames below London bridge, where it must have lain for centuries. Some workmen in the time of the Romans was carrying this sack of cement from a moat to the shore, when the burden slipped from his shoulders into the water. There, under the action of the water, it became solid and, as years passed away, the sack at last rotted off, leaving only the hardened cement within.

Herring Gull Flies Far

The herring gull's range is wide. Every harbor along the South Atlantic coast has its flocks, and the birds find a living in the Gulf of Mexico and about the lakes and rivers of the interior. One might say that wherever the waters offer food there the herring gull will be found.

A FOUR FOOTED FAITH AND A TWO

In Which the Love of a Dog Far Outshines That of a Master, Who Doesn't Deserve the Title.

By ELEANOR PORTER

Author of "Pollyanna," "Just David," Etc.

Copyright by Eleanor H. Porter.

ON Monday Rathburn took the dog far up the trail. Stub was no blue-ribbon, petted dog of records, and pedigree; he was a vicious-looking little yellow cur of mixed ancestry and bad habits—that is, he had been all this when Rathburn found him six months before and championed his cause in a quarrel with a crowd of roughs in Mike Swaney's saloon. Since when he had developed into a well-behaved little beast with a pair of wistful eyes that looked unutterable love.

Rathburn had rescued the dog that day in the saloon more to thwart the designs of Pete Mulligan, the head of the gang and an old enemy, than for any compassion for the dog itself; but after he had taken the little animal home he rather enjoyed the slavish devotion which—in the dog's mind—seemed evidently to be the only return for so great a service as had been done him. For some months, therefore, Rathburn petted the dog, fed him, taught him to "speak" and to "beg," and made of him an almost constant companion. At the end of that time, the novelty having worn thin, he was ready—as he expressed it to himself—"to call the whole thing off," and great was his disgust that the dog failed to see the affair in the same light.

For some time, Rathburn endured the plaintive whines, the questioning eyes, the frequent thrusts of a cold little nose against his hand; then he determined to end it all.

"Stub, come here!" he called sharply, his right hand seeking his pocket. With a yelp of joy the dog leaped forward—not for days had his master voluntarily noticed him.

Rathburn raised his pistol and took careful aim. His eye was steady and his hand did not shake. Two feet away the dog had come to a sudden halt. Something in the eye or in the leveled weapon had stayed his feet. He whined, then barked, his eyes all the while wistfully demanding an explanation. Suddenly, his gaze still fixed on his master's face, he rose upright on his haunches and held before him two little dangling paws.

There was a silence, followed by a muttered oath, as the pistol dropped to the ground.

"Confound my babyishness!" snarled Rathburn, stooping and pocketing his weapon. "One would think I'd never seen a gun before."

This was on Sunday. On Monday Rathburn took the dog far up the trail.

"Want a dog?" he said to a low-browed, unkempt man sitting at the door of a squat cabin.

"Well, I don't. I ain't buyin' dogs these days."

"Yer don't have ter buy this one," observed Rathburn meaningly. The other glanced up with sharp eyes.

"Humph! Bite?" he snapped. Rathburn shook his head.

"Sick of him," he returned laconically. "Like his room better'n his company."

"Humph!" grunted the other. Then to the dog: "Come here, sir, an' let's have a look at ye."

Five minutes later Rathburn strode down the trail alone, while behind him on the other side of the fast-shut cabin door, barked and scratched a frantic little yellow dog.

Tuesday night, when Rathburn came home, the first sound that greeted him was a joyous bark, as a quivering, eager little creature leaped upon him out of the dark.

On Wednesday Stub trotted into town at Rathburn's heels, and all the way down the straggling street he looked neither to the right nor to the left, so fearful did he seem that the two great boots he was following should in some way slip from his sight. And yet, vigilant as he was, the door of Swaney's saloon got somehow between and left him on one side barking and whining and yapping like mad about the room, while on the other his master stood jingling the two pieces of silver in his pocket—the price Mike Swaney had paid for his new dog.

Halfway up the mountain-side Rathburn was still chuckling, still jingling his coins.

"When a man pays money," he was saying aloud, as he squared his shoulders and looked across the valley at the setting sun, "when a man pays money he watches out. I reckon Stub has gone for good, sure thing, this time!" And yet—long before dawn there came a whine and a gentle scratch at his cabin door; and although four times the dog was returned to his new owner, four times he escaped and nosed the long trail that led to the cabin on the mountain-side.

After Stub's fourth desertion the saloon-keeper refused to take him again, and for a week the dog lay unmolested in his old place in the sun outside the cabin door, or dozed before the fireplace at night. Then Rathburn bestirred himself and made one last effort, taking the dog quite over the mountain and leaving him tied to a tree.

At the end of thirty-six hours, Rathburn was congratulating himself at the end of thirty-seven he was crying, "Down, sir—down!" to a joy-crazed little dog which had come leaping down the mountain-side with eighteen inches of rope dangling at his heels—a rope whose frayed and tattered end showed the marks of sharp little teeth.

Rathburn gave it up after that, and Stub stayed on.

As the days passed food became scarce in the cabin. It had been some time since Rathburn had gone to town for supplies. Then came the day when a great joy came into Stub's life—his master spoke to him. It was not the old fond greeting, to be sure.

And so it came about that Stub in obedience to that sharp command, frequently scampered off with his master to spend long days in the foothills, or following the mountain streams. Sometimes it was a partridge, sometimes it was a squirrel or a rabbit—whatever it was that fell a victim to Rathburn's gun, Stub learned very soon that it must be brought at once to the master and laid at his feet.

It was on one of the days when work, not hunting, filled the time, that Rathburn came home after a long day's labor to find Stub waiting for him with a dead rabbit. After that it came to be a common thing for the dog to trot off by himself in the morning; and the man felt more and more in the way of letting him go alone, as it left his own time the more free for the pursuit of that golden sprite who was ever promising success just ahead.

As for Stub—Stub was happy. He spent the long days in the foothills or on the mountain-side, and soon became expert in his hunting.

Gradually as the days passed there came still another change in the life at the cabin. Rathburn's step became slow, and his cheeks sunken. Sometimes he did not leave home all day, but lay tossing from side to side on his bunk in the corner. At such times, if the result of Stub's hunt were eatable, the man would rouse himself enough to stir the fire and get supper; and always, after such a day at home, Rathburn was astir the next morning at dawn and off in feverish haste for a long day's work to make up for the long day of idleness.

But there came a time when he could not do this—when each day found him prone on his bunk or moving feebly about the room. Then came a night when Stub's bark at the door was unanswered. Again and again Stub demanded admittance only to be met with silence. The door, though unlatched, was swollen from recent rains, and it took five good minutes and all the strength of one small dog to push it open a narrow foot, and then there were only silence and a dying fire by way of greeting.

Stub dropped his burden on the floor and whined. He was particularly proud tonight; he had brought home a partridge—the first he had ever caught without the aid of his master's gun.

The figure on the bed did not move. The dog picked up the bird he had dropped and walked toward his master. This time he laid his offering close to the bunk and barked.

The man stirred and groaned. For long minutes the dog stood motionless, watching; then he crept to the fire and almost into the hot ashes in his efforts to warm the blood of his shivering little legs.

In the morning the fire was quite out. Stub stretched his stiffened body and gazed about the room. Over on the bed the man did not stir nor speak. The dead bird lay untouched at his side. There was a whine, a bark, and a long minute of apparent indecision; then the dog pattered across the floor, wormed himself through the partly open door, and took the trail that led to the foothills.

Three times Stub brought to the fireless, silent cabin the result of his day's hunt and laid it at his master's side, and always there was only silence or a low groan to greet him.

On the third night it snowed—the first storm of the season. A keen wind swept down the mountain and played hide-and-seek with the cabin door, so that in the morning a long bar of high-piled snow lay across the cabin floor.

When the men from the village ploughed their way through the snow and pushed open the door, they stopped amazed upon the threshold, looking at one another with mingled alarm and pity; then one of them conquering his reluctance, strode forward. He stooped for a moment over the prostrate form of the man before he turned and faced his companions.

"Boys, he's—gone," he said huskily; and in the silence that followed, four men bared their heads.

It was a dog's low whine that first stirred into action the man by the bunk. He looked down and his eyes grew luminous. He saw the fireless hearth, the drifted snow, and the half-dead dog keeping watchful guard over a pile of inert fur and feathers (the floor—a pile frozen stiff and mutely witnessing a daily duty well performed).

"I reckon I'm needin' a dog," he said, as he stooped and patted Stub's head.

European "Holy Grass"

Sweet-grass, or vanilla grass, is the holy grass of Europe, which is strewn before churches and religious processions. It is the material from which the Indians of the St. Lawrence region weave, when dry, their thin-walled baskets, and which, when made of the genuine grass, retain an odor of new-mown hay indefinitely.

Another sweet grass does not in the least resemble grass, having whorls and white flowers like tiny stars in green. When dried, it is fragrant, however. The name is given, also, to certain other plants, most of which are fragrant, especially in drying. A sweet, vernal grass is found in fields and meadows over nearly the whole of America.

Wonders of Insect World

The champion acrobat is the king grasshopper, which has the ability to jump 100 times its length, and can sail for 1,000 miles before the wind. The cricket is a powerful singer, its shrill note sometimes being heard a mile away. The males listen to their mates, and the females listen to their mates on their forelegs. Being so musical, it would hardly be expected that they would be such fighters among themselves as they are, or cannibals, eating members of their own species when there is not enough other food at hand.—Our Dumb Animals.

Bestowed in Derision

The sobriquet "Nutmeg State" is conferred upon the state of Connecticut, the shrewd inhabitants of which were once jocosely charged with manufacturing candied nutmegs, in imitation of the genuine article, and palmimg them off on unsuspecting customers.—Kansas City Star.

Mammoth Magnifier

A scientist has succeeded, by the use of ultra-violet light and a dark background, in making a photo-micrograph with a magnification of 25,000 diameters. On this scale a lawn tennis ball would appear a mile and a half in diameter, and a pin's head would appear to measure 40 yards across.

Sea Serpents Seized Steamship in Straits

Although sea serpents are now generally conceded to belong only to the world of fables, there are approximately 50 species of snakes that make their home in salt water, some of them attaining a length of several feet. They are poisonous, according to Popular Mechanics Magazine, and although timid under ordinary conditions have been known to attack savagely when disturbed. When the steamship Ikala dropped anchor in the Straits of Macassar not long ago, it roused a school of salt-water reptiles that swarmed on board, crawling up the chains and hawsers. The ship was reported to have been held up several days before the snakes could be driven away. In many respects these reptiles resemble the land varieties, but have broad paddle-shaped tails, which enable them to swim rapidly after small fish.

American Population Has Drifted to Cities

At the birth of the American nation 130 years ago, its largest city had not more than 43,000 inhabitants and only one person out of thirty lived in the six towns of 8,000 or more inhabitants. Abram L. Harris, Jr., writes in Current History Magazine. In 1800 there were in the United States only six cities whose population was over 8,000 and these contained only 4 per cent of the population of the entire country. In 1900 there were 547 such cities, which at this time contained 32.9 per cent of the country's population. But in 1920 the number of such cities had increased to 924 and contained 43.8 per cent of the total population. Today nearly one-half of the American population lives in places of over 2,500 inhabitants, a tenth in villages and hardly more than two-fifths in the open country.

Mail Clerk in Luck

A few weeks ago a registered letter containing $6,000 was sent from a firm in New York to a bank in Augusta, Maine. On failure to arrive in Augusta an Inspector traced it to a point on a Maine railroad. The mail clerk to whom it must have been delivered was faced with the charge of theft. He asked permission to search his car on the main train that he had worked on. Under observation he was allowed to do so. After a long search and just at the moment when he was about to give up in despair, the clerk happened to glance down behind some steam pipes and picked up the letter. The car in which it had rested had been used for weeks on different parts of the system.

Here's Singing Rat

One of the families of Anderson are being regaled every night by a singing rat, says an Anderson (S. C.) dispatch to the New York World. Each night Archie McConnell and family, who live a short distance from the city, have heard this unusual sound and have finally traced it to a rat.

Mr. McConnell says the notes are not unlike those of a canary bird and they continue for hours at a time, often long after the family has retired. The rat is like an ordinary rat, except, Mr. McConnell says, it has a sort of proboscis which may account for its singing ability.

Lightning Gives Idea

At a carnival in northern England a tent in which a wireless concert was in progress was struck by lightning. The canvas was split, but the most curious effect was that the dark brown stockings and green blouse worn by one of the women in the tent were bleached white. Such a happening suggests that scientists might profitably investigate the possibility of adapting electricity for bleaching purposes.

Sea Monster Dragged Boat

A sea monster measuring 17 feet in length and 12 feet in girth, and weighing nearly two tons, was captured at Simon's Town, South Africa. When harpooned, this species of sea elephant dragged a 30-foot motorboat two miles and put up a desperate fight before being killed.

DRUDGERY

The weary tasks, the dreary tasks, the tasks of every day. The tasks without a glint of gold to gleam upon their gray: Dishpan and nailron, tub and broom. Till darkness falls—and then Dawn, and the dreary, weary round of leaden tasks again.

The common tasks, the simple tasks my hands have learned by heart. The tasks wherein my busy brain no longer bears a part: Dreary indeed, if idle brain must lag on, loiter-wise. Forgotten wings a-dragging, and ashes in its eyes!

But happy tasks the daily tasks my hands can do for me. If I set them going at my work and let my soul fly free. I set them going at their work, and float in skies of flame, And such a shining silver to shores without a name.

I climb my childhood's fairy hills and pluck the laurel flowers; I weave a web of purple thoughts across the dusty hours; I play with olden golden words that men have made before. And hang them for a lighted lamp above my kitchen door.

Ah, happy tasks, and blessed tasks, and tasks that set me free. When my hands are in the soapuds and my soul is on the sea! —Florence Crannell Means, in Grit

Lie Above Ground in New Orleans Cemetery

As New Orleans is built on land which is below the level of the Mississippi there is difficulty in burying the dead in ordinary graves, owing to the water seepage. So the plan has been adopted of placing the bodies in masonry vaults built in rows, and one above another, as shown in the picture. The idea was borrowed from Europe, where it has long been in use. The most extensive and famous cemetery of this sort in the world is in Genoa, Italy, where the vaults, each one with a body in it, and sealed up, stretch in almost endless succession. —Pathfinder Magazine.

THE AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service)

GIVES FIVE YEARS TO LEGION CAUSE

National Adjutant Russell G. Crevelton is rounding out the fifth year of his service with the national headquarters of the American Legion. Crevelton, who was reappointed adjutant by Commander James A. Drain, following the St. Paul convention of the Legion, began his service with the national headquarters as head of the organization division.

Mr. Crevelton was born near Marion, Ind.; prior to his coming to the Legion he was with the field section of community service. He was stationed at Minneapolis and took a leading part in organizing the Minnesota department of the Legion, becoming a charter member of the first post in the state. He was very active in arrangement for the first convention of the veterans, which was held in Minneapolis in November, 1919.

Franklin D'Oller, who was elected national commander, requested community service to lend Crevelton to the Legion. Crevelton headed the organization division until September, 1920, when he became assistant national adjutant. When the first national adjutant, Lemuel Bolles, resigned in January, 1924, Mr. Crevelton was immediately appointed adjutant by John R. Quinn.

One of the pet projects of the national adjutant is the development of the Legion in foreign lands. He has seen the incalculable value to the organization itself and to the nation as a whole of the existence of strong units of this great society of veterans abroad.

Entering the military service on June 6, 1917, as a private in the Fourth Indiana Infantry, Mr. Crevelton attended the Second Officers' Training camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison and was commissioned first lieutenant. Originally attached to the Three Hundred and Twenty-seventh Machine Gun battalion, he was transferred to the headquarters staff of the Eighty-fourth division and put in charge of the administration co-ordination section. He later served as an inspector on the general staff and was commissioned captain. He was discharged June 7, 1919.

To Have Post Honoring Two New Jersey Youths

Maple Shade, N. J., will soon have an American Legion post, the Antinimontz post, in honor of two Maple Shade youths and heroes of the World war. Harry Antinimontz enlisted in the United States navy at the beginning of the war, and was assigned to the U. S. S. Buena Ventura, a supply boat, which was torpedoed on September 16, 1918. Antinimontz was rescued in a lifeboat, but heroically went back to his ship, which was sinking, and attempted to save some of his comrades. Antinimontz went down with the ship. Norris M. Metz was a private in headquarters company, Three Hundred and Fifty-ninth Infantry, and was wounded in action in France and later returned to the ranks in October, 1918. He was again wounded in action November 5, and died shortly after from his wounds. His body was returned to the United States and interred in the Arlington Naval cemetery with full naval honors.

Denounces Method of Showing Patriotism

The peculiar method taken by some Americans to express their patriotism was censured by West Hoboken (N. J.) unit of the American Legion Auxiliary when a resolution was introduced denouncing the use of models of Washington, Lincoln and Roosevelt in making novelty cakes of soap which are being sold in New York department stores. A member of the unit declared she found miniature busts of Presidents on sale at the toilet counter of a New York store. Upon examination of the busts she found them to be soap replicas of our national heroes and made in Germany.

Martyr-Soldier's Bible Given Place of Honor

In the king's private library at Windsor castle, as well as in the king's library at the British museum, the Bibles are a special feature, and if it were possible to imagine these treasures being put up to auction at one of the famous salerooms, all the collectors in the world would gather to bid for them.

But it is not an illuminated Bible, over which some monk spent half a lifetime, or the earliest printed Bible, or a "Breeches" Bible, or even a "Bugs" Bible—so called because it says, in a certain well-known psalm: "Thou shalt not be afraid for any bugges by night"—which is the best-guarded and most honored copy of the Scriptures.

This distinction belongs to a worn, even tattered copy of the Scriptures, just the ordinary lump-backed little Bible which thousands of people take to church or keep in readiness there. This Bible lies open, upon a beautiful cushion, enclosed in an exquisite old casket, in a window of Windsor castle.

The open page is much soiled and thumbed, certain passages are underlined and there are numerous pencilled notes in the margin. This is General Gordon's Bible, given by his sister to Queen Victoria.—London Tit-Bits.

Thought for Next Day Has No Place in Congo

In many parts of the Congo horses are unknown and the natives are as terrified at them as at an elephant or a hippo, says Mme. Gabrielle M. Vassal in the London Graphic.

Though the food ration of the Congo natives is most frugal, consisting chiefly of manioc, it is at least regular, and in this starving country is the chief attraction to them and keeps them as a whole cheerful and healthy. The Congo population is always hungry, if not starving; it is impossible to sound the depths of their laziness and want of thrift. They never think of the next day. When they are paid they buy a white helmet, a tweed cap or a knitted tam-o'-shanter, though their thick frizzled hair really needs no covering. The reason for cannibalism in the Congo is hunger more than anything else, says Mme. Vassal.

Thought He Was Singing

From the well-known big game hunter, F. C. Cornell, comes the story of how one evening he was returning to camp in South Africa from a prospecting expedition, unarmed and alone, when, to his horror, he found himself stalked by three leopards.

"Knowing from experience that most wild beasts are frightened by the human voice," says Mr. Cornell, "I let out a yell that scared even myself, and repeated the dose every few yards of the way back, until I was as hoarse as a crow, and my yells began to lack vim.

"Bit pleased with yourself, ain't you?" was my welcome on reaching camp. "We heard you singing for the last hour or more. Thought you might have struck someone with whisky."—San Francisco Argonaut.

First Use of Envelopes

Envelopes were not in common use until about 1820. In 1825 Lamb mentions the envelope and in "Harry Lequer" published by Charles Lever in 1837, is this quotation: "The waiter entered with a small note in an envelope." It is claimed that envelopes were used in France before they were introduced in England, and this seems to be good ground for the claim. When they first came on the French market they were very dainty novelties and were made from the most expensive and delicate papers. They were used only by the wealthy and were considered a fad. They were used by the public in England in limited way between 1830 and 1839.—Lathfinder Magazine.

How Birds Bathe

The most elaborate dressers of the animal world are the birds, all of whom take baths whenever possible. Some of them use earth, sand or dust. When these find a suitable spot they scratch up the surface and then shift backward, moving legs and wings and working the dirt right through the feathers.

Most birds, however, are water bathers. Some, such as the kingfisher, plunge right in. This bird usually dives from a branch, entering the water with open wings and making great splash. In addition to his morning toilet, the kingfisher has a complete bath after eating fish that he catches; so that he often takes a dozen headers during the day.

Throw Hats at Candidates

The word "betman" is a title given to the commander in chief of the Cosacks, annually chosen from among their number. The process of selection offers a contrast to the American custom of figuratively throwing one's hat in the ring as a sign of willingness to accept the nomination to office. Among the Cosacks it was the custom while in assembly to throw their fur caps at the candidates for whom they voted, and the one receiving the greatest number was declared elected.—Baltimore Sun.

Pay Attention to Values

The man who insists on full value for his dollar generally accumulates wealth. If more attention were given to values, more men would get rich. The relation of price to value is the most important study in economics.—Grit.

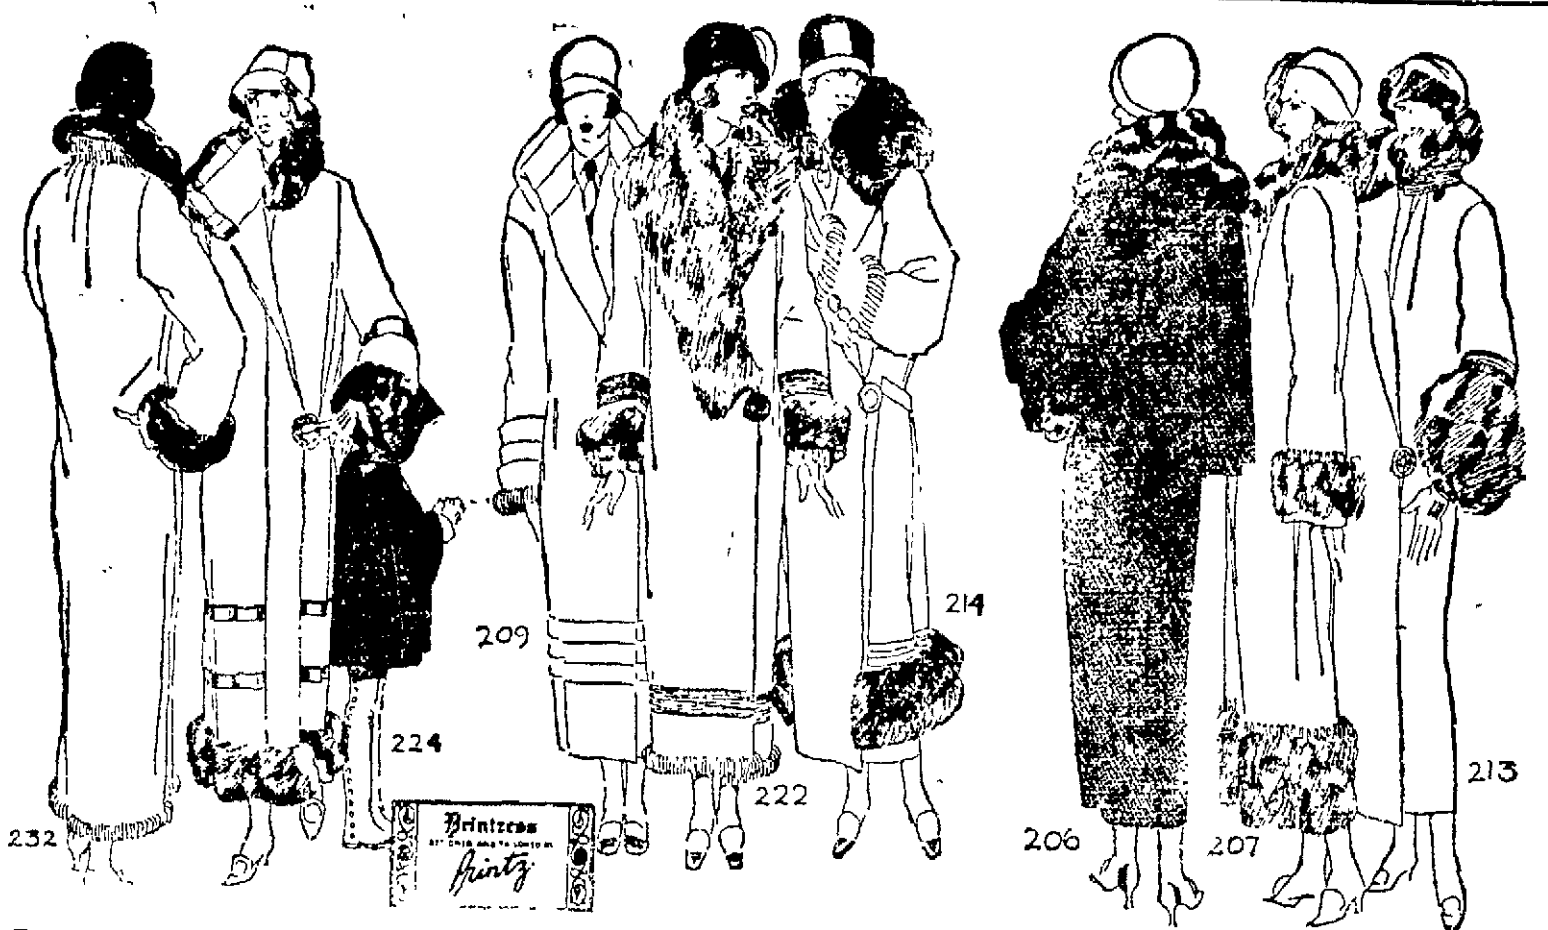

Quaint Pine Tree

The Torrey pine for the most part hugs the ground with its quaintly twisted branches, says Nature Magazine. It is remarkable for its needles, eight to twelve inches long. This vanishing tree is found only in the Monterey peninsula.
